Count Ilya Tolstoi.
Ivan's Library.
The Blind Story Teller.
Burton and Fannie Hurst.

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Count Ilya Tolstoi, son of the great Russian, would interest you.

He is tall, with wide shoulders, his eyes deep set, blue, rarely smiles. Serious subjects occupy him. A flowing white beard, and all his features suggest the noble face of his father, rugged, earnest. The history of Russia, with its centuries of suffering and earnest thought, are written in that face.

You get from him no commonplace answer even to commonplace questions.

What became of Voltaire's library that Catherine the Second bought and took to Russia?

"Ah, that you would probably find in the hermitage."

A more important question is: "What became of the library of Ivan the Terrible?" The Shah of Persia gave it to him, with all that remained of the great library of Alexandria, three times burned.

"Who knows what treasures were in that library, what Greek manuscripts that we thought lost forever?

"Some think it is hidden away under the floor of the Kremlin, with a vast Ivan treasure. The Bolsheviks are probably looking for both now."

The son of Tolstoi, who preached against violence, loathes Bolshevism, believes that it is drawing to a close because the peasants will rise against it.

He agrees that Ivan the Terrible made an Asiatic nation of Russia, Peter the Great changed Asiatic Russia to a European nation, and now Stalin is trying overnight to make an industrial nation of peasants that know and want only agriculture.

He calls Ivan, Peter, Stalin, all three Bolshevists. He does not like men that interfere with others and impose their will.

He asks:

"But why call Ivan 'the Terrible' when you have Stalin? Bolshevism has killed 5,000,000. Ivan personally ordered perhaps 50,000 killed. He carried with him a little book in which were names of the 5000 most important men that he put to death. Every night with his book he knelt in his chapel to pray, saying 'God, I am here to pray for 5000 that I have killed. Thou, God, knowest their names.' "

Strange is belief that the souls of 5000 murdered would be helped by the prayers of the murderer.

You ask who was Rasputin, suddenly forced upon American consciousness by the three Barrymores, and this answer comes:

"Well, Rasputin was a remarkable man. Like his father, he was a horse thief and a drunkard. Occasionally he would sober up, go into the forest and become inspired. Then he would visit monasteries and become religious. He exercised great power, was a remarkable man, considering that he was a horse thief and a drunkard, son of a horse thief and drunkard."

Count Tolstoi knew Max Gorky, and told this story, which should encourage young people of talent not yet recognized. Gorky, destined to be a famous writer, and Chaliapin, now a great operatic singer, were both penniless, almost starving.

They entered a great Russian church and asked the priest to let them sing in the choir. He hired Gorky to sing, sent Chaliapin away, telling him he had no voice.

How did it happen that Count Tolstoi's father, a soldier, member of the aristocracy, very rich, with vast estates, took so early and earnestly to writing?

"Because the mother of my father, a Russian princess, was always deeply interested in stories and told them constantly to my father from his babyhood."

As the twig is bent the tree is inclined. You are reminded of Goethe's saying that from his father he got his height and earnest nature, from his mother his gay disposition, and lust zu fabuliren, "love of telling stories."

Hear this story of old Russia:

"My grandmother was so fond of hearing stories that she bought a blind man who was a famous story teller. How do I mean that she BOUGHT him? Well, he was a Serf, and she bought him as she would buy any other Serf. She picked out a blind man because he could sit in a corner of her bedroom and tell stories while she undressed and went to bed. He couldn't see anything, so it was quite correct. At her leisure she undressed, while the blind man droned on. She then got into her bed, beside a sacred ikon, with a little oil lamp forever burning near it. My grandmother was very religious.

"The blind man would go on with his stories until he knew that my grandmother was asleep and then steal softly from the room without disturbing her.

"How could he tell that she asleep? His ears knew, Mr. Brisbane, that blind man had wonderful hearing. He could hear the little mouse licking the oil

PAIR PARTED BY HIS LOVE CONFESSION

Goes to Friend's Camp While She Stays With Relatives

Confession of his secret affairs with Mrs. Jessie B. Costello, accused as a murderess, have parted Edward McMahon, young Peabody police reserve, and his wife, it was learned today.

The young wife, Mrs. Mary McMahon, suddenly changed her mind on last week's announcement that she would stand by her erring husband and took her two small babies to the home of relatives in Salem.

The McMahon home in King st., Peabody, is unoccupied, the young officer having left there for a camp of a friend on Danvers river. It was learned that he first visited the home of his father and was received cooly.

Relatives of his wife were also reported as refusing him refuge. A report that he went to the home of an uncle, Police Capt. Dominic Tahaney of Beverly, was denied by that official.

MENTAL TESTS OF WIDOW

The startling turn came while Mrs. Costello prepared in Salem jail for her first mental examination by state alienists, a procedure required by law in murder cases.

The doctors who will determine the mental stability of the woman accused of giving cyanide to her husband, Fire Capt. William J. Costello, are Clarence V. Bonner of Danvers State Hospital, and Dr. L. Vernon Briggs, Boston alienist. Their findings will be reported to Dr. Winfred Overholser, assistant commissioner of the state department of mental diseases.

Several such examinations are in store for the accused widow, it was indicated today, before a final decision on her mental status is reached.

BELIEVE HER INNOCENT

Mrs. Costello spent a quiet weekend in the jail. She was visited as usual by her father, Andrew Fyfe, and ate an apple pie he took to her.

Assurance of Mrs. Ralph E. Blair, Peabody social worker and friend, that women friends believed her innocent, cheered the imprisoned woman somewhat, jail officers reported.

Dr. Harris S. Pomeroy, another central figure in the strange case, was still behind doors closed to visitors and police questioners in his home in Main st., Peabody.

District Attorney Hugh A. Cregg, whose attempts at questioning have been blocked many times by counsel for Dr. Pomeroy, said today "there would come a time when the doctor would be questioned."

Two Safes Looted of $500

Cracksmen continued work over the week-end by opening two safes according to reports received at Mattapan and Field's corner police stations early today.

Charles W. Murphy, of the C. W. Murphy Coal Co. at 193 Talbot ave., reported to Station 19, Mattapan that he found his office had been broken into; that the safe had been blown to pieces and $400 taken.

The Ferry Food Shop, 530 Gallivan blvd., was entered by breaking a window in the rear door and about $100 was taken from the safe, which was ripped open.

Special Officer Roland Bird, fingerprint expert of police headquarters, later reported he had found several good prints at both places.

PARKER MAY BE NAMED TODAY

George A. Parker, former captain of the State police, may be named to his old post today by Brig.-Gen. Daniel Needham to succeed Capt. Charles T. Beaupre resigned at Needham's request following his acquittal by a secret court martial.

Needham indicated that in the event Capt. Parker cannot accept the post, he will pick Beaupre's successor from among present officers of the state police.

"Although mild pressure has been brought to bring about the appointment of certain outsiders with military records, I would think twice before going outside the force for Beaupre's successor," Needham said.

BANDITS GET $1000 IN WOBURN

Tie Up Guard and Friend and Rip Open Ice Plant Safe

Three masked bandits bound and gagged two men, ripped open a large safe, and escaped with nearly $1000 in cash, early today, at the plant of the Horn Pond Ice Co., Woburn.

Edward Kelley, 30, watchman, and Edward Connolly, 21, a friend who was keeping him company through the night, were surprised by the bandits while making the rounds of the plant.

The invading trio, two of whom wore black masks and the other a white handkerchief, ordered Kelley and Connelly into a small pump house for the tying-up process. The gags were of adhesive tape.

A door was smashed by the trio before they reached the safe in the front office.

After an hour's struggle, Kelley told police, he managed to work his hands free and then untied Connolly. As he and his friend lay tied up, Kelley said, he heard the bandits leave in an automobile.

STAY ON BANK AS POLICE DRAG THE RIVER

Police Crew Works All Night in Hunt for Other Victim

Muddy river, directly opposite Simmons College, today held in its unyielding grip the body of little June Bolduc, 8, in seeming defiance of police grapplers, who worked through the night under fire department floodlights.

At Southern Mortuary, the body of her playmate, Helen Lindenmann, 9 furnished definite evidence that Roxbury's most baffling mystery had been precipitated by accidental drowning of the two girls Feb. 21.

PARENTS AT SCENE

It was the floating body of the Lindenmann girl, sighted yesterday by four Roxbury youths, that furnished first real evidence that the missing girls were entombed in the murky waters of the river.

Captains Stephen J. Flaherty, of the Roxbury Crossing station, and Perley Skillings of the Back Bay station, led the police detail through the night and early morning hours at the river.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bolduc, parents of the little girl, paced the river bank. The parents well knew from the finding of the Lindenmann body that their child was dead too. Both had gone to the river "to see the lucks."

Sergt. Cecil E. Lewis of Back Bay headed the dragging detail of four from Back Bay and two from the harbor police. Even as the dawn of another day peeped over the Simmons College buildings, scores of private citizens watched each move in the small boats.

DRAGGED MANY TIMES

That section had been dragged many times before. The bottom is a network of stumps, tree branches, debris and any number of crannies in which a small body could lodge.

The body of the Lindenmann girl was first sighted by Owen J. Winn of Parker st., Roxbury. He was walking along the riverbank with William Fitch of Parker st., Maurice McKenna of St. Alphonsus st. and Michael D'Connor of Longwood ave.

The pom-pom of the girl's hat was the only part visible and Winn shied a stone in the belief that the floating object was a turtle. The ripple of the water disclosed the clothing and ended the mystery of the disappearance.

Parents of both girls were grief-stricken today but, in a measure, relieved that their girls did not die at the hands of a fiend, as had been feared.

RETIREMENT OF HINDENBURG IS FORECAST IN BERLIN

OVERSHADOWED BY HITLER AS DICTATOR

Aged President Splits With Von Papen Who Is Cool to Chief

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND
Universal Service Special Cable

Berlin, March 27—With Chancellor Hitler carried to the heights as all-powerful dictator of Germany on the crest of the wave of Nazism, certain national circles are agitated by the question of how long the aged president, Field Marshal Von Hindenburg, will be content to remain under the shadow thrown over him by the former army corporal.

For years Von Hindenburg has been the first figure in Germany. A mountain peak over all else in the popular mind is now suddenly overtopped by Hitler, who has been given greater powers than the president.

WON'T BE PUSHED ASIDE

Those in a position to know the field marshall recall his remark:

"When I am superfluous I will go."

They say Von Hindenburg will not suffer himself to be pushed aside. They predict that only the greatest delicacy and tact on the part of the new dictator will avert Von Hindenburg's retirement.

The Monarchists had hoped to clear the way for a regency, leading eventually to a restoration, but they are still stunned by the blow given them in the Reichstag by Hitler, when be declared the question of a monarchy "undiscussable," and by the pre-emptory dissolution of the "Bayerwacht," the Bavarian Monarchist military organization.

SPLIT WITH VON PAPEN

There is much whispering in inner circles that Von Hindenburg's friendship with and confidence in former Chancellor and present Vice-Chancellor Von Papen is cooling off. Von Papen does not now visit the Prehisent nearly so often as before.

There are other signs of a rift between Von Papen and Hitler over the latter's failure to fulfill an alleged promise to make Von Papen premier of Prussia. Von Papen now has little chance for the premiership. It will probably be added to the many honors held by Capt. Hermann W. Goering, Hitler's right-han d man, who is virtual dictator of the Prussian state.

With the wholesale removal of Nationalist as well as Socialist office-holders, Hitler is extending his hold down to the small villages throughout the entire country.

ECONOMY CAMPAIGN

Hitler for the first time in history has made of Germany one centralized state, something even Bismarck failed in doing.

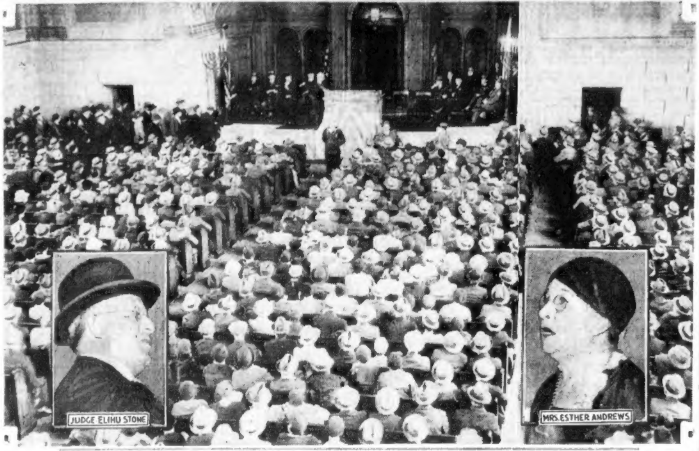
The dictatorship government has settled down to the task of reviving pre-war prosperity in the reach by means of rigid economy.

While Hitler still remained away from Berlin in a retreat near Munich, the cabinet began discussion of a drastic economy program aimed at balancing Germany's budget.

It was reported noe of the first acts in the drive to revive prosperity would be establishment of compulsory labor service, with trade unions wrested from the Socialists and placed under Nazi control.

According to Dr. Mahnkens, federal commissioner for labor service, compulsory labor will be decreed within the next few days.

MIGHTY JEWISH THRONG VOICE PROTEST OF OUTRAGES



A crowd estimated at more than 7000 thronged the Temple Mishkan Tefila schoolhouse and the Temple auditorium yesterday to voice their protest of the reported outrages against Jews in Germany. The meeting originally scheduled to complete arrangements for a protest meeting was turned into a protest due to the huge crowd. The picture above shows part of the huge throng that crowded into the schoolhouse where Samuel Kalesky presided as chairman. Among the speakers were Judge Elihu Stone and Governor's Councillor Esther Andrews. (Boston American Photo.)

JEWISH LEADER DENIES ABUSE

New York, March 27 (AP)—Ernest Wallach, vice-president of the Central Association of German Citizens of Jewish Faith, in a telegram to Governor Lehman of New York, and others, urged, on behalf of the president of his organization, that a mass meeting scheduled for Monday night be cancelled.

Wallach is now in the United States on business. His message was addressed to Alfred E. Smith, Bishop William T. Manning, Bishop Francis J. McConnell, Rabbie Stephen S. Wise and others.

The telegram said:

"The undersigned vice-president of the Central Association of German Citizens of Jewish Faith has just received the following cable from the president of the association, Dr. Julius Brodnitz in Berlin:

"'We earnestly urge you to do all in your power in order that Monday's mass meeting be called off, or if such should, against our sincere hopes, not prove possible, to prevail upon the speakers of the evening to refrain from stirring the emotions of their audience against Germany. We can assure them that the German government is permanently and successfully engaged in assuring peace and order to all citizens without discrimination.'"

Jewry to Unite in Protest of Outrages in Germany

Boston Jewry today prepared for a gigantic protest meeting to be held next Monday evening at Faneuil Hall, to condemn the reported outrages against Jews in Germany.

The final arrangements were to have been completed at a meeting scheduled to be held in Temple Mishkan Tefila schoolhouse, Roxbury. This gathering, however, was attended by more than 7000, and it was turned into a protest meeting, in which two resolutions were adopted, and in which various speakers condemned the reported outrages.

Alleged Communists, who attempted to attend the meeting, were spotted by police and refused admittance to the gathering. The first resolution adopted called on Americans of every faith and denomination to join their Jewish fellow citizens in protest against the alleged injustices of which German Jews have become the victims in the meeting planned for Faneuil Hall on April 3.

The second, a copy of which is being sent to the British ambassador to the United States, urges the government of Great Brintain, the mandatory for Palestine, to liberalize the immigration laws there to permit German Jews to enter the Holy Land.

Speakers included Alexander Brin, editor and publisher of the Jewish Advocate; Samuel Kalesky, Rabbi Herman Rubenovitz, Mrs. Esther M. Andreds, Jennie Loitman Barron, president of the Women's division of the Boston American Jewish Congress; Elihu D. Stone, president of the New England Zionist Region; Maxwell Cohen, department commander of the U. S. Jewish War Veterans; Philip Potash, Isadore H. Fox, City Councillor Israel Ruby, Reps. Hyman Manevitch, Samuel Cohen, and State Sen. Joseph C. White.

LONDON JEWRY PLAN BOYCOTT

London, March 27 (AP)—London Jews, disturbed at reports of Jewish mistreatment in Germany, are considering a boycott of German goods.

The board of deputies of British Jews, the most influential semitic body in Great Britain, met behind closed doors and passed resolution of condemnation and calling for arrangements for a public meeting at which the situation could be discussed and a protest made.

Neville Laski, chairman, said afterward he had told the meeting:

"It is untrue to say there has been anything like a mass massacre; but there have been many acts of physical and of grave character deliberately directed against individuals because they are Jews."

GIRL ATTACKED, ESCORT SLAIN

Houston, Tex., March 27 (AP)—William W. Porch, Jr., was brutally slain and Miss Adele Torian, 24, was criminally attacked, early today, allegedly by Negro terrorists. Both Porch and Miss Torian are members of prominent Houston families.

Officers, with bloodhounds brought from the city prison farm, were combing the thick woods of the neighborhood. Other bloodhounds from the state prison farm near Sugar Land were en route.

According to the account given by the hysterical girl, the young couple were sitting in an automobile on the Scott street road when the Negroes reared up on each side of the machine. Both were armed, Miss Torian and Porch were ordered out of the car.

"I thought I told you to hold up your hands," Miss Torian quoted one of the Negroes as saying.

Almost at the instant the Negro spoke, she said, he fired at Porch, who was facing the other Negro.

France Pays With Talk

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

French have finally made up a terrific concession on the war debt.

They're willing to talk about it.

They know they can outtalk us.

We will have to wind up a couple of our diplomats and let them fire away until they die down.

We will lose the spelling bee. But think of what a nice chat we will have had.

One word leads to another But both of them get nowhere when the other guy is directing the verbal traffic.

And we will be happy to know that we will be following the slogan of the World Court and the League:

"All's well that ends nowhere."

HITLER MOVES ALARM JEWS

Berlin, March 27—While Hitler government officials today continued to declare reports of anti-Semitism in Germany had been greatly exaggerated, Jews themselves were alarmed by two significant developments.

One was the appointment of Deputy Kube to the presidency of the Province of Brandenburg, which includes Berlin.

The other was the appointment of Capt. Brueckner to the presidency of Breslau.

Both men are considered by Jews as hostile and have been named as leaders in recent demonstrations against Jewish interests.

Soldier Is Held After Shooting

Sausalito, Cal., March 27 (AP)—A coast artilleryman was shot to death and two Sausalito sisters were wounded in an aftermath of a theater party here which led to the arrest of Pvt. E. L. King of Fort Barry by army authorities.

Katherine Talbott, 20, bruised by clubbing, testified before an army board of inquiry her refusal to go with King on a drive after the party caused the shooting. The dead man was Pvt. John Smith, 25, of Fort Scott. The other wounded girl was Irma Talbott.

GERMANS URGE OLYMPIC BAN

Dresden, Germany, March 27 (AP)—The Turnerschaft of the State of Saxony adopted a resolution in which the Deutsche Turnerschaft (the National Gymnastic Association) was asked to use pressure to bar the 1936 Olympics from Berlin if "Germany is not granted political equality."

The Deutsche Turnerschaft, with 1,600,000 members has been nonpartisan in the past.

There was a strong odor of coal gas as the mountain continued its slow disintegration. Today's show was the first external evidence of the fire which some geologists say has been going on under the mountain for months.

Dogs in Two Maine Counties Chained

Portland, Me., March 27 (AP)—The Portland health department was advised by Dr. George H. Coombs, director of the State bureau of health, that all dogs in York and Cumberland Counties must be kept off the streets until danger of a state wide epidemic of rabies has subsided.

While the order is in effect, Coombs said he would recommend that all dogs be vaccinated against the disease.

Several cases of rabies have been reported in southwestern Maine since a rabid dog ran wiild in Waterville last week, biting three persons and 24 dogs.

Dreary Days Near for 5 Held in "King" Probe; Foley to Act

"We is got da gran' ju-u-u-ry blues!"

Through the eighth floor of Hotel Statler the ole blues wafted today when bad news done come and tell 'em colored boys the ole grand jury wants to know about dat Solomon boy.

And dat means the verra end of dam steaks, 'n' caviar, 'n' chops, 'n' desserts, 'n' fancy fixin's.

Five Negro witnesses of the Charlie (King) Solomon Cotton Club slaying see the end of their high, wide and handsome protection with the announcement of Dist.-Atty. William J. Foley that the April grand jury will hear the Solomon case.

It means that the police will no longer harbor in luxury the colored quartet and Al Brantley, Cotton Club master of ceremonies, who are into the third month of high living at city expense.

The gloomy horizon worried them more today than the squabble between Mayor Curley and Police Commissioner Hultman over who would pay the rest of the bills.

More than $1700 the city paid for the first month. Bills for $1200 more were sent back with a little note that from now out the party is on Hultman. Hultman said the witnesses must be protected. The boys on the eighth floor said "Aye."

By the looks of things, they have at least a few more weeks, whether the party be on Hultman or on the city.

Slashed Rein Blamed in Girl's Fatal Plunge From Horse

Morristown, Pa., March 27 (AP)—Miss Helen Golden, 23-year-old Norristown telephone operator, was killed here in a fall from a horse which police said had one rein of its harness cut almost clear through in two places.

Charles L. A. Eiler, Montgomery County detective, said he found the right rein broken after the accident yesterday at a riding academy in Fairview, six miles west of here.

One cut, which he said caused the rein to break, was made edgewise on the leather, about eight inches above the bit. The other, about an inch above that, was made across the width of the leather. Eiler said a sharp knife apparently had been used "very recently."

Robert Grover, 19, who has been living at the academy for the last four months, since he was employed by the owner, Eugene Kindland, was brought to Norristown by Eiler for questioning.

Grover owns the horse which Miss Golden was riding. The detective said Grover formerly was employed as a trick rider with a rodeo which played in Norristown last summer, and had bought the horse a week ago.

Miss Golden's neck was broken and her skull was fractured. Mark Novell, a Norristown merchant, who, with the girl's 21-year-old brother, Edward, and a group of friends had witnessed the fall, brought her to a hospital here. She died within a few minutes.

Eiler said Miss Golden had been riding about an hour and a half and had returned to the stable to ask if she might ride Grover's horse. She rode out of the academy at a gallop and had gone only about 75 yards before she fell. The horse halted.

JAPS FORMALLY QUIT LEAGUE OF NATIONS

Island Mandates Not to Be Surrendered; Press Flays U. S.

Tokyo, March 27 (INS)—Emperor Hirohito today formally approved Japan's resignation from the League of Nations.

In doing so, the Emperor gave the measure for withdrawal the highest sanction possible in the power of the Island empire.

This step was taken after the privy council unanimously adopted the measure in a plenary session held at the Imperial Palace in the presence of the "Son of Heaven."

SECRETARY TOLD

The announcement was later telegraphed to Sir Eric Drummond, secretary-general of the League, at Geneva.

The document informs the League that "the Japanese government has come to the conclusion it can no longer co-operate with the League, and hereby notifies the League of Japan's withdrawal, according to the provisions of Paragraph 3, Article 1, of the League covenant."

The announcement brought to a climax the chain of events begun when Yosuke Matsuoka, Japan's chief delegate, who is now in the United States, walked out of the League assembly when that body adopted a report censuring Japan's military activities in Manchuria.

Limiting its announcement to 700 words, the Japanese government declares the assembly adopted the report condemning Japan through inability or unwillingness to understand the facts of the situation in the Far East.

WANTS PEACE

Japan, the document said, desires to maintain peace in the Orient. Despite secession from the League, it adds, Japan will co-operate with other nations in efforts for world tranquillity.

No mention is made of the mandated islands now in Japan's possession, but official spokesmen declared Japan's secession has nothing to do with this problem.

Attempts by other nations to wrest the islands from Japan, it was added, will be met with determined opposition.

The spokesmen added that Japan would continue participation in the disarmament conference and other discussions held under League auspices, but emphasized this participation would be "perfunctory" owing to inability of Japan and the League to see eye to eye.

ACCUSES U. S.

The newspaper Nichi Nichi, meanwhile, added fuel to the flames by printing a report stating the United States, China and Germany were suspected of acting in complicity over the mandated islands now in Japan's possession. The islands formerly were German property.

Among those declared to be behind "these machinations" are Secretary of State Cordell Hull and Dr. Alfred Sze, Chinese minister to the United States. China, the paper said, is offering special favors to both Germany and the United States.

MAINE BATTLE OVER BEER

Augusta, Me., March 27 (AP)—Maine's prohibition bark, threatened by a tidal wave of 3.2 beer, still has a fighting chance to weather the storm and come safely through to calm waters.

That is the belief of prohibition forces in the legaslature who are preparing to throw out a life-line of unconstitutionality when the beer issue is fought out in the House this afternoon or Tuesday morning.

A bill legalizing the manufacture and sale of beer in Maine came into the House as an amendment to the Weatherbee transportation measure, which provides that intoxicating liquors for personal use may be transported in the state.

Anti-prohibitionists are confident of success. It is expected the bill will be further amended with a refendum clause and a taxation feature.

Socialists Lose Seat in Election

Gmuend, Austria, Barch 27 (AP).—In municipal elections here, the National Socialists increased their mandates from four to nine, while Socialists, ho previously had 11 seats, won 10, and the Christian Soclay party dropped from eight to five. Gmuend is on the Czechoslovakian border.

OLD TIME LOCAL OPTION PLAN IS URGED

Committee Speeds Action So Beer Can Be Sold Here April 7

Emergency legislation and temporary resort to the old local option system are the pressing needs to assure residents of Boston and Massachusetts 3.2 per cent beer, when it becomes legal, April 7.

This decision has been reached by the legislative committee on legal affairs, which goes into executive session this afternoon to draft an emergency measure to provide for the license and sale of the foaming beverage on the opening day.

Because of opposition to some of the provisions in the Warren liquor control plan it has been definitely decided that the portions of the report relating to beer must be separated from the rest.

Democratic members of the committee were to confer with Gov. Ely during the morning on the outline of an emergency bill for license and sale of beer. The governor is definitely decided on an insistence on beer legislation in order that it might be sold here April 7.

WARN OF "WHOOPEE"

Details of the legislation may take some time to work out, but the committee is unanimous in its determination to report a bill for quick action by the House and Senate. The measure will become effective with Gov. Ely's signature.

While preparations were being completed to assure the sale of beer, "wets" were sounding a warning. Fear was expressed by many that the return of beer would lead to excesses which would bring to a stalemate efforts to ratify the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

Gov. Ely indicated his displeasure at reports that hilarious parties were being planned. It was evident that "wet" leaders would see that the brakes would be applied in the event it appeared there would be a carnival of over-indulgence in Boston and the State.

They are convinced that the people of the nation will never be satisfied with beer alone and do not wish to jeopardize the chances of nationwide repeal by unfortunate excesses at the present time.

BREWERS ARE BUSY

Hearings on liquor control bills are expected to close tonight. Further time will be devoted later to hard liquor provisions but the legal affairs committee is agreed that beer provisions must be settled at once.

Meanwhile, Boston breweries have ordered full crews of bottlers to be on hand today. Work will be started on bottling the first cases of 3.2 beer brewed here and tier on tier of bottles will be stacked in the breweries ready for April 7 delivery.

Nearly 200 members of the old Bartender's Union met last night under their new designation of Beverage Dispensers. Business Agent John J. Kearney announced he expected within a short time to find jobs for 1000 former bartenders.

Most of them will be employed cooling, drawing and serving beer. Leading hotel and restaurant proprietors have already put in requests for men to fill such jobs, he said.

Beer Prosecutions End in New York

New York, March 27—Beer, as far as the Federal Courts in New York City are concerned, is a legal beverage already. Both George Z. Medalie, U. S. attorney for the southern district of New York, and Howard W. Amell, federal prosecutor for the eastern district, announced that they would no longer prosecute prohibition cases in which the "amber colored fluid" involved was classified as a "beverage believed to be beer."

Einstein to Stay Out of Germany

Southampton, Eng., March 27—Prof. Albert Einstein reiterated here that he will not return to Germany as long as the Fascist regime prevails there, as he arrived aboard the Belgenland.

TODAY

from the lamp that burned beside the ikon.

"They are treating my father's estates in Russia well. My sister under Bolshevism made a school of my father's great house. Bolshevists fixed the roofs, made the repairs that my sister could not do. She made them do that. The Bolsheviks may deny God, but they cannot deny Tolstoi. Civilization would not tolerate it."

Count Tolstoi tells you that the sister who made Stalin take care of her father's house is now in America, "and very happy. On her little farm in Pennsylvania she has a cow, 100 chickens and she is writing a book. What else could she want?"

Tolstoi, who must live by his pen, said, "Advise me, Mr. Brisbane," and for that reason this column is written as a prelude to this message to Mr. Burton, editor of Cosmopolitan Magazine, first in its field and paying the highest prices:

"Mr. Burton—Get and print stories of ancient and modern Russia, also his thoughts and feelings from this sole son of the great Tolstoi. He inherits his father's talent, but would not write while his father lived, because a 'son of Tolstoi writing' would be like a mouse beside an elephant.'

"Ask Fanny Hurst to see Tolstoi, and talk to him. Her talent and kind heart will make it easy for him and give to your readers the real Tolstoi, and the real Russia."

And ten to one she will say to Mr. Berlin, Cosmopolitan's business manager, "Send the whole check to Count Tolstoi, I would not take a dollar of it." Thus she would place herself beside Michelangelo, who told the Pope, when he was building St. Peter's, "Your Holiness knows that I gain nothing by it except the good of my soul."

Society Ears Shocked by Language of Parrot

Canse, France, March 27—A gag rule has been invoked for Koko, pet parrot at the Restaurant Les Ambassadeurs here as a result of visits to the cafe by prominent women of whom Mrs. Henry Clews, social leader of Newport and New York, is one.

Mrs. Henry Clews

Kobo has habit of indulging in strong language, unfitted for the ladies' ears. While no protest was received from guests, the management felt that steps should be taken to purify his language. Therefore a husky bodyguard stands by to clap a gag on Koko whenever he runs off the line in a verbal way.

Payson Smith Urged as New Hunter Head

New York, March 27—The name of Payson Smith, Massachusetts Commissioner of Education, has been recommended for consideration as the new head of Hunter College in a list made public by the Institute for Public Service.

Commr. Smith

If selected, Commr. Smith would succeed James M. Kierman. The selection will be made by the New York Board of Higher Education. Others on the list were, Dr. E. A. Fitzpatrick, graduate dean of Marquette University; A. N. Farmer of Cleveland, Dr. Paul Stetson of Indianapolis and Whiting Williams, Oberlin College lecturer.

Williams Memorial to Grace New Chapel

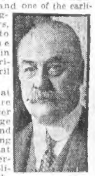
Valley Forge, Pa., March 27—A memorial chapel to Roger Williams, founder of the state of Rhode Island and the first American to advocate religious tolerance will be erected at the Washington Memorial Chapel here, according to an announcement made by the Rev. W. Herbert Burk, rector of the chapel.

Rev. Burk

The announcement was made at a celebration of Rhode Island State Sunday, here. Dr. Burk said that the work and faith of Roger Williams helped form the basis for religious toleration in the constitution.

Nicholas Murray Butler Faces Own Beer Problem

New York, March 27—Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University and one of the earliest and strongest wet leaders, will have to deal with the beer problem in his own territory after April 6.



Nicholas Murray Butler

Students at Columbia are advocating beer for the college dining halls and are circulating petitions to that effect. Undergraduate publications are publishing editorials that good cold beer will keep the college students away from the speakeasies surrounding the college campus.

WATERS OF MUDDY RIVER SURRENDER SECRET OF LOST GIRLS

HELEN LINDENMANN
WHOSE BODY WAS FOUND
IN MUDDY. RIVER YESTERDAY

SCENE OF FINDING LITTLE HELEN

Sunday crowd of thousands gathered along Muddy river, at and near the spot where the body of the Lindenmann girl was found. Friends of the other girl—June Bolduc—are hopeful that the long search for her will also end today. Discovery of the body eliminates all theories of foul play, police believe. CURLEY MAPS SLASH PLAN

Mayor Curley came to his desk at City Hall today after spending most of yesterday afternoon and evening at his Jamaicaway home wrestling with the economy program he is mapping out to save $15,000,000 in the municipal budget.

Working with the mayor were City Treasurer Edmund Dolan, City Auditor Rupert Carven and Budget Commr. Charles J. Fox. Orders were given that they were not to be disturbed.

No comment was made as to what action they had taken. It is understood, however, that their efforts were devoted almost exclusively to the slashing of city expenditures and salaries.

Three Threatened With Death in $600 Theater Holdup

Action of police officials was expected today as a result of the unusual number of holdups and breaks in the city over the weekend. More than $5000 in money and jewels was taken in a score of robberies.

The latest holdup came last night, when a well dressed, armed man, entered the office of the manager of the Shawmut Theater, Blue Hill ave., Roxbury, held up Elmer Levine, manager, and his two assistants, and escaped with $600.

The holdup came as a crowd sat in the theater unaware of the crime. The gunman threatened the three with death if they made any outcry.

The largest theft reported was from the home of Mrs. Emma R. Swirbalus, in West Broadway, South Boston. Jewelry, with an estimated value of $2210 was taken, including a wrist watch set with five diamonds and six emeralds, a bracelet set with 20 diamonds and emeralds, a platinum bracelet with 40 diamonds, a platinum pendant with three diamonds, a bar pin, a diamond dinner ring and a watch.

A safe, containing $600, was stolen from the branch office of the Edison company in Fairmount ave., Hyde Park. The safe, with the door ripped open, was found last night by police of the Fields Corner station in Commercial creek at Victory rd. Feeport st.

Clothing and jewelry valued at $300 was taken from the home of Kenneth Crowell, of Sanfdor st., Dorchester. Burglars entered the offices of the P. H. Davis Tailoring Co., Summer st., Boston, and stole 50 suits and a numebr of overcoats .

LA BOULAGE TO SEEK PEACE

Paris, March 27 (AP)—A determination to work constantly for a better understanding between France and America was expressed today by Andre Lefevre De La Boulaye, new French ambassador to the United States, in a message to America.

He told of his pleasure in returning to a country where his two children were born, where President Roosevelt is a friend, and where he spent six years as a disciple of Jean Jules Jusserand, former French ambassador to Washington.

He abstained from a discussion of Franco-American problems. Declaring that while the countries sometimes lacked understanding, they never lacked sympathy.

RACER INJURED IN FALL

North Conway, N. H., March 27—A Harvard graduate student and a Vermont youth were in the hospital here today with injuries sustained while competing in the down hill ski race in Tuckerman's Ravine, Mt. Washington, yesterday afternoon.

John Hallowell of Readville, Mass., member of the Harvard ski team and former crew captain, broke both legs just above the ankle when he failed to negotiate a turn in the dangerous 2.3 mile course. He plunged almost 200 feet through the air before he fell.

William Knight of Wells River, Vt., competing for the Silver Fox Outing Club, in the same contest Jack Auwerter, member of the Dartmouth ski team suffered a dislocated shoulder practicing.

Cape Isolated as Blizzard Breaks Wires, Blocks Roads

Repair crews were busy all along the cape today remedying the damage caused yesterday by an all day snowstorm, which snapped telephone and light wires, broke tree branches and almost paralyzed highway traffic in the section.

It was still snowing along the cape at midnight, but weather officials here said today would be clear. The storm, which raged all day yesterday, was centered off Nantucket and would pass out to sea today, according to the weather bureau.

The official prediction is for fair weather and rising temperature today. Cloudy and warmer weather with possible showers is forecast for tomorrow.

Boston and its environs, except for two slight flurries, escaped the storm entirely. Along the cape, however, the snow started at 6 a. m. and continued all day, accompanied by a 40-mile gale. At midnight several inches of snow were reported in most places.

The tip of the Cape was practically cut off from the world. There was no telephone or lighting service, wires being forced down by the weight of snow or snapped in the wind. Highways were covered with drifts and practically impassable in many places.

There were no telephones in operation from Orleans to Provincetown. In the opposite direction there was spasmodic telephone service, but all lights were out and residents were burning oil lamps and candles last night. Fallen wires and broken limbs of trees also menaced travel on the various Cape roads.

SCREEN BEAUTY DROPS DIVORCE

Los Angeles, March 27 (AP)—The Examiner says it has learned from Mary McLaren, sister of Katherine MacDonald, who was known as the "American beauty" of the screen in the days of silent pictures, that Miss MacDonald and Christian R. Holmes, her husband, have reunited after engaging in divorce proceedings.

The reconciliation, Miss MacDonald said, took place several weeks ago and, at the Featherhill ranch of Holmes, servants said the couple are expected to return there from the fashionable colony at Montecito, near Santa Barbara, Calif.

Holmes, nephew o fthe wealthy yeast manufacturer, Max Fleischmann, married the actress April 26, 1928. She had been married twice previously.

GOLD AGE GONE, SAYS ROGERS

Modest circumstances and reasonable wages and comforts are the best young people can expect today, Robert E. Rogers, M. I. T. professor and Boston Evening American columnist, declared in a talk at the closing of the season of the Old South Forum.

Taking as his subject, "The End of a Golden Age: What May Our Children Expect?" Prof. Rogers declared the end of this age had created a feeling of resentment and keen disappointment in the younger generation, who were brought up to believe the world would give them a grand time.

He also spoke on education and said the country in the future would be unable to afford the kind of school system maintained in the past. He declared the schools must have simpler courses and differentiate between essentials and luxuries.

He said Americans are beginning to learn the sky is no longer the limit for any individual. Unemployment, in his belief, had become a permanent problem and the people would have to reconcile themselves to a lower standard of living.

Dorchester Trio Held in Break

Daniel Delsilvia, 17, and Charles A. McCusker, 17, both of Coleman st., Dorchester, today joined as defendants, Peter DePesa, 18, of Harrison pk., Dorchester, as those whose wild ride in a stolen car ended in a smashup at Blue Hill ave. and Glenway st., Dorchester, Saturday night.

DePesa was arrested at the scene of the crash. The other two were taken at their homes yesterday.

TEACHERS BALK AT PAY PLAN

As a result of opposition expressed by Melrose school teachers, the school committee has notified the board of aldermen of that city that it is not in favor of the proposed voluntary contribution plan of the city government of giving one half of one per cent of every $100 in salary received to the city.

The committee further says that if voluntary contributions are made, a portion of the money should go to the Municipal Unemployment Relief Committee, which carries on its business independently of the city welfare department. Police and firemen have already notified the city government they are not in favor of the plan submitted.

Rites for Labor Leader Wednesday

Funeral services for Francis R. Sheehan, active in labor circles for many years, will be held Wednesday with a solemn high mass of requiem at St. Joseph's Church, East Boston. He died at his home in Thurston st., East Boston, after a brief illness. He is survived by his widow and by a brother.

YOUTH HELD IN POSTAL THEFT

John J. Slattery, 24 of Bowdoin st., West End, will be arraigned in Malden court today charged with breaking and entering and larceny in a Fourth st., Medford, drug store, early yesterday.

Due to the fact that a sum of money was taken from a sub-postal station in the store, the federal government has become connected with the case and Slattery will probably be taken to Federal court later.

He was captured by Patrolmen Charles Graham and Bernard Creedon, of the Medford department, after a 15-mile chase in which several shots were fired. The chase ended in East Lexington.

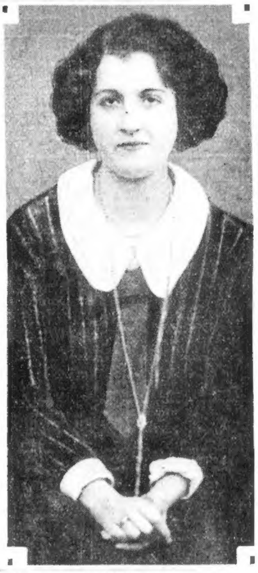
COSTELLO MAID TALKS—"COP" MISSING

MAID TELLS COSTELLO STORY

Katherine Simbolist, maid in the Costello home at Peabody, has told how Mrs. Jessie B. Costello, now held for killing her husband, Fire Capt. William J. Costello, had warned her about being careful concerning very powerful mixture. This mixture, supposed to have been used for kitchen utensils, will figure in trial evidence. The "smiling widow" warned the maid to not let her son, Bobby Costello, get near the mixture. She said everything seemed as usual on morning of the fire captain's death. The maid insisted she did not smell fumes of any supposed poisons.



THE WIFE OF "KISS AND TELL" MAN

Yesterday at Peabody and Salem the rumors that the "Kiss and Tell" reserve police officer, Edward J. McMahon, was missing from his home. His whereabouts were not known, according to story coming from his beautiful wife (above), Mrs. Mary McMahon. Police did not know where he had gone since last interrogation by law officials of Essex County. Dr. Harris S. Pomeroy still denies story that he was mixed up in the love life of Mrs. Costello. This story was told by the missing admitted lover of the woman, now held for poisoning her fire-fighting husband. (Boston American Photos.)

1 HURT; 1 JAILED IN LONG CHASE

A party, which started in Canal st., Salem, wound up early today in Canal st., Boston, after a meless, an auto accident and a chase through Chelsea and Charlestown.

As a result Leonardi, 24, of Maverick st., East Boston, is under treatment at Haymarket Relief station for head injuries and Michael Pieronte, 28, of Cross st., Somerville will be arraigned in Chelsea court today on a variety of charges.

Both were present at the party during which trouble developed. Leonardi was thrown down a flight of stairs and crashed through a glass door.

Piemonte put him in his auto and started for Boston. In front of Chelsea police headquarters he struck another auto, overturning it and caromed off, sideswiping a police car. Chelsea police gave chase, but failed to overhaul him.

He reached Haymarket sq., carried Leonardi to the door of the Relief station and then started away. Boston police halted him in Canal st.

15 INJURED IN CHURCH FIRE

Montreal, Que., March 27 (AP)—Fire, believed to be of incendiary origin, destroyed St. Jacques Roman Catholic Church at St. Denis and St. Catherine sts., one of the most historic churches of this city.

Fifteen persons, including six firemen, were injured, one dangerously.

Damage was estimated at between $300,000 and $500,000.

Ten o'clock mass had just ended, and Abbe Oscar Valiquette was leaving the pulpit when cries of fire were heard in a gallery above an entrance. The flames spread quickly. Ushers directed members of the audience to leave without disorder. The church had a capacity of more than 2000 and was well filled. Several women jumped from the balcony and were bruised.

Firemen said they learned that Saturday night an unidentified woman had visited the presbytery and warned officials of the church the building would be set afire.

Greta Garbo Sails; in Gable Film Next

Hollywood, March 27 (AP)—Greta Garbo, Swedish film star, who has sailed for the United States from London, probably will be co-starred in a picture with Clark Gable upon her return here, it has been indicated at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, where her films are made.

Brookline Man Near Death in Leap

Police Turn Nurses as Stork Wins Race With Ambulance

"Young man, you're the father of a husky girl!"

That might have been the announcement of Michael J. Kilroy and James J. Morgan, of Brighton had their life's work been medical careers instead of policemen.

But the stalwarts were too excited for that when they ushered into the world the daughter of William Gardner, of 43 Bigelow st., Brighton. As it happened, they were unwilling attendants in a speeding police ambulance.

Kilroy and Morgan "did pretty well," however, according to Dr. Philip McManus, of St. Elizabeth's Hospital.

Mrs. Gardner, the proud father and the baby were doing well when they reached the hospital. The officers were as well as could be expected—except for a surplus of nervous perspiration.

Story of the Modern Arkad Is Yours for the Asking

In ancient Babylon there lived a certain rich man named Arkad. He was famed for his generosity toward the public welfare and, despite all he gave away each year, his wealth grew more rapidly than he spent it.

The story of Arkad and how he amassed his wealth is one of the most interesting chapters in a booklet being distributed free in Boston. The title of the booklet is "The Richest Man in Babylon," and it shows how the same laws that led to financial success 5000 years ago are just as sound today if they are followed.

Written interestingly in semi-fiction style, there is nothing technical about it—its lesson is adaptable to the economic habits of men and women who today are concerned with the problem of putting aside a competence for the future.

If you want a copy of this booklet it will be sent free to you by Hearst Consolidated Publications, Inc., 100 Summer st., Boston, Mass. without obligation. Just send your name and address.

DAVIS TO SPEED WORLD PARLEY

Washington, March 27 (US)—Secretary of State Hull has instructed Norman H. Davis to exert every pressure and influence in Europe to have the date for the world economic conference set as early as possible. This was learned on highest authority here.

Davis, during his stop in London this week on route to the Geneva disarmament conference, will urge the British government to line up behind the American move. He will make similar overtures to the German and Italian governments.

The organization committee of the economic conference will meet soon to agree on the date. That date must be at the first possible moment, preferably in May.

Hearst Ranch, San Simeon, Cal., March 26—America hasn't had a visitor in years with the motion picture potentialities of George Bernard Shaw, famous English playwright. Seventy-seven years old, as straight as an arrow, as slim as a stripling of 19, with the pink cheeks of a girl, the great Bernard Shaw had all theg uests at the William Randolph Hearst ranch sitting at his feet.

Riding horseback, playing tennis and swimming in the pool were all forgotten, while the feminine guests sat and listened. Shaw, with more appeal than a Maurice Chevalier, more charm than Charlie Chaplin, held court every afternoon while he drank his tea.

VENOMLESS WIT

Marion Davies, Frances Marion, Maureen O'Sullivan, Constance Talmadge, Mary Brian, Mrs. Adolph Menjou, Mrs. John Hearst, Dorothy Mackaill, Justine Johnstone, Irene Brown, Mrs. Walter Wanger, Mrs. George Young, Juliet Compton and Mrs. John Considine were a few of the Shaw admirers who drank in every word the great writer said.

Seldom do we meet a man who measures up to every expectation as completely as does this cherubic faced youngster of 77. True, his publicized wit is even sharper than we were led to expect, but sharp as his matchless wit is, it lacks the venom so often attributed to him.

With equal equanimity he discusses world disarmament, the gold standard, what's wrong with the movies, sex appeal and stage celebrities of the last 60 years, always with the same disarming twinkle in his clear blue eyes.

There were 40 guests at San Simeon, the oldest being Mr. Shaw. He was the first up in the morning. I found him communing with the eagles, a part of the menagerie on the ranch. I heard him regret that one of the young lady guests was so commonplace as to choose a horse when she might ride a zebra.

TRAGIC EXPRESSION

He has ideas on every subject, including motion pictures, and believe it or not, he is not as caustic against the screen drama as he has been reputed.

"Is it true, Mr. Shaw," I asked him, "that you will refuse to let any of your plays be filmed?"

"Certainly not," he said. "I am extremely anxious to have them all filmed before I die. But the studios are not yet doing thee lass of work my plays require. Most of them still think that a play is only a movie with spoken sub-titles."

I told Mr. Shaw that Charlie Chaplin had always wanted to play "Hamlet."

"Why not?" he asked. "Long before Mr. Chaplin became famous, and had got no farther than throwing bricks or having them thrown at him I was struck with his haunted tragic expression, remarkably like Henry Irving's. And Irving made a tremendous success as Hamlet—or rather an invention of his own which we called Hamlet. By the way, I have sometimes thought of rewriting Hamlet so as to bring out what Shakespeare was driving at, and what he would haveb rought out completely himself if behad been a consecutive thinker instead of an intellectual volcano proceeding by eruptions followed by intervals of extinction."

AUTO LOADS OF INVENTORS

..When I spoke enthusiastically of the film drama his comment on my emotion was "Well, you needn't cry about it."

I reproached him, adding, "I gave you a glowing review on your movietone."

"Well," was his unexpected reply, "why shouldn't you? It was a very good movietone."

The Shaw account of how he directed that movietone beggars description. " Avan full of machinery arrived, followed by nine automobiles. Each automobile contained five passengers; and every passenger was the sole inventor of the talkies."

The anonymous "Gabriel Over the White House" was shown to the guests at San Simeon. Mr. Shaw it through, and surmised that President Roosevelt had written it to induce the American public to give him dictatorial powers. But he enjoyed it.

"It is a recreative film," he said, "and not a worrying, exhausting one, like so much Hollywood stuff. One goes to bed refreshed after it."

He suggested that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer make a special version for England with Ramsay MacDonald in an aeroplane substituted for "President Hammond" in an automobile.

SCREEN A FAIRLAND

The Shaw speaking voice is extremely pleasant, and although Mr. Shaw talks constantly he always has something worth while to say. His volubility is astonishing. He has ideas on every subject, and one need never try to guess his opinions. He tells them straightforward and without any quibbling.

The publicity imposed on motion picture actresses is, he thinks, a complete mistake.

"The moment you let the public peek behind the scenes there is an nd of the theater," he says. "The stage and the screen are fairyland, and whoever lets the audience into its secrets is a traitor to dramatic art. The rehearsal room should be more sacred than the confessional. As to those films which give false picture of the work behind the scenes to pander to the paul prys who think that it is dirty work and that the artists are dirty people, they are dishonorable and disgusting, and their authors should be drummed out of the profession."

One of the guests, a young scenario writer, asked the famous playwright for some professional advice.

"There is only one infallible maxim," said the sage. "The moment you have finished your play begin another. Don't bother about its production; that is not your business. Keep writing. Accumulate copyrights. I had 10 plays waiting for production before I became a recognized playwright."

I innocently asked him whether his friend Gene Tunney was not the original of Cashel Byron in his prizefighting novel.

UNJUST TO BEARHARDT

"Young woman," he said solemnly, "Cashel Byron was superannuated before your or Gene was born or conceived. Corbett, who died a few weeks ago as an elderly man, played Cashel Byron when he left the ring for the stage."

"But," I said, "Did not Gene want to play Cashel."

"On the contrary," was the reply, "he refused to play him. He is far too intelligent. The film firms bought options on him for the part; but he read the book and at once saw that Cashel is not really an attractive character."

"What about Sarah Bernhardt?" I asked.

"I was unjust to her," he said. "She reminded me too much of my Aunt Georgina."

One can hardly record the many quips uttered by George Bernard Shaw, who is an amazing combination of wit, mentality and kindliness. To do justice to him one would have to keep a daily journal with quotations seven days a week.

In all my years interviewing—he has the most fascinating personality of any person I have ever met, and he contributes more to the ordinary, every conversation. No interview could adequately describe his sparkling ,alive personality, his twinkling blue eyes and his sharp wit, undimmed by age, and unspoiled by the adulation the world gives him.

COUPLE WAIT AT RIVER FOR BODY

children were part of a group that had been chased away from the thin ice area of the river by Michael F. Lynch, caretaker of the Fens Stadium.

Children were wont to play around willow branches which overhung the river at that point. Lynch cleared the section but fears now that the girls might have returned later and fell through the ice.

It was Lynch who hauled the body of the Lindenmann girl to shore after Winn and his companions had shouted to him for aid.

Word of the find was flashed to the Prentiss st. homes of the two girls and identification was made by relatives of the Lindenmann family. Miss Helen Lindenmann, 24-year-old sister of the river victim, hurried to the Fens, but was requested not to view the body because of her condition that bordered upon hysterics.

NEWS BROKEN TO PARENTS

The report of the find was given to Mrs. Boldue at her home after it had been withheld for many hour and then approached to her gradually.

After the first outburst of grief had been given vent by the parents, they turned to prayers of Thanksgiving that they at least knew their children died by accident and not through foul play.

If the body of the Boldue girl is found in time, it is expected that a double funeral will be held, with playmates of the little girls as an honor escort.

BANK SUITS GO TO U. S. COURT

two months ago, but it did not become known.

The filing occurred immediately after the Worcester grand jury had returned a "no bill" as a result of their investigation into the bank's affairs.

In his suit Guy alleges the directors "repeatedly resorted to fictitious and colorful loans to avoid the provisions of the law."

FIVE INVOLVED

The suit brings the amounts sought for recovering in suits and cross suits against the Federal National Bank and affiliated State banks, including the Bancroft Trust Co., State National Bank of Lynn, Brockton Trust Co., Lawrence Trust Co., and the Inman Trust Co., of Cambridge, to a total of $9,000,000.

In addition the State is to file a suit for $3,000,000 against the Federal National.

Although Commr. Guy and his associates have several suits filed against the Federal National, the Worcester suit is the first in which allegations are made openly that illegal methods were used by any officers of the affiliated banks.

CHARGE LAXITY

Included among the allegations are charges the the ban's directors made no examinations or injuiries of maturities and notes discounted; failed to inform authorities of the way the bank's affairs were managed and relied on vague and superficial work of examining committees.

Another suit filed in Worcester Superior Court names Gen. Edward Logan of Boston, former Congressman Michael Phelan and Attorney Starr Parsons of Lynn, defendants in a move to recover $15,000 on a note they allegedly signed and discounted.

Gen. Logan, his brother, Francis V. Logan, and Emma E. Mullen of Brighton, a relative, are among nine defendants named in suits on which trial starts tomorrow. They were filed for Attorney Harry E. Linscott for the closed State National Bank of Lynn.

Reward for Proof of Jew Killings

Hamburg, Germany, March 27 (INS) — The newspaper Nachrichten today offered 2000 marks to any one able to prove that a single Jew had been executed or murdered in Hamburg in connection with the Nazi-dominated "Awakening of Germany."

The offer was made in a further effort to combat outside reports of anti-Jewish pogroms, which, an official spokesman for Chancellor Hitler told International News Service, were absolute lies.

Feeley to Speak at Home Institute

The Home Institute, 87 Beacon st., sponsored by Better Homes in America, of which Donald Smith Feeley is director, will give its 22d and final lecture of a course on interior decoration and different period furniture on Wednesday at 2:30 p. m. at the Boston Art Museum.

Donald S. Feeley

Mr. Feeley will conduct the class through the building for research among the different periods discussed during the previous classes.

The committee is headed by Mrs. James J. Storrow assisted by Miss Mary Driscoll.

MORTGAGE RATE SLASH SOUGHT

Fight for four per cent interest rates on home mortgages was opened today by the Massachusetts Real Estate Owners' Association, the organization which lodged charges against Mayor Curley and the city government a month ago.

Mrs. Hannah Connors, of Dorchester, presided, sponsoper the move at the same time that she expressed confidence in President Roosevelt.

In her plea for lower mortgage rates, Mrs. Connors admonished her listeners to "wake up and stop being slaves and doormats for the city and for mortgagees."

Other speakers, at the meeting in Tremont Temple, were City Councillor Francis E. Kelly, of Dorchester and John F. Dowd, of Roxbury.

3 FAITHS UNITE IN MANIFESTO

New York, March 27 (AP)—Prominent Catholics, Protestants and Jews joined in issuing a manifesto through the National Conference of Jews and Christians, calling for tax reforms, more adequate provision for the unemployed and legislation to check a breaking down of standards of labor.

The manifesto was signed by 180 clergymen and laymen. It resulted from a series of informal discussions during the past several months as to the possibility of members of the Three Friars being able to agree on a joint utterance.

Eastern signers include: Rev. William E. Gilroy, Rabbi Harry Levi, Bernard J. Rothwell, Rev. Russell H. Stafford, all of Boston; Rev. E. Talmadge Root of Somerville, Mass., and Rabbi Samuel J. Abrams of Brookline, Mass.

Poles Protest Atrocities

Warsaw, March 27 (AP)—Polish Jews closed their shops and factories today in a protest against the treatment of co-religionaries in Germany.

Bonus May Be Dead, But Consequences Remain

By GILBERT SELDES

I suppose that nothing is deader, at the moment, than the agitation for immediate payment of the soldiers' bonus, the object for which men marched last Summer and the occasion of the moment which I still consider the most deplorable in the history of the depression—the calling of Federal troops. It's over and done. Not only have many leaders of the American Legion publicly asked for suport of the President, but no sign of revolt has been noted. We have faced a crisis and a lot of things have disappeared—from the right of a banker to do funny things with other people's money, to the right of any group to prevent another group from drinking beer. The demand of the bonus army is only one of the victims of the decisive action in Washington. It could not be revived without an attack on the financial position (not yet achieved) on which the whole of Mr. Roosevelt's reconstruction plan is based. In a sense the soldiers' bonus surrendered in order to save the gold standard; when it vanished it helped to create international confidence in America's stability and, deviously, to re-establish American confidence in America. Let us, without judging its original merits, say that nothing in its life so became it as the leaving of it.

Gilbert Seldes

Military Results

It may be the moment, however, to note some of the consequences in the future—and they are not financial consequences. They are, in a way, military. I recall the promise of Mr. Lloyd George: that England would be made a country fit for heroes to live in, the heroes being those gentlemen who were fighting in Flanders. I recall, domestically, a song which was sung in the spring of 1918 to the general effect that "when you come back, and you will come back, there'll be a whole world waiting for you."

Soldiers, especially when drafted, have short memories, but in this case no ground for doubt existed. The whole world, in the form of pensions and preferment, had been waiting for the veterans of the Civil and the Spanish-American wars. No good American went to fight Germany in order to have a pension for life when he returned; but it was gratifying to feel that the returning hero would be rather nobly treated.

No More Profit

I suggest that the rejection of the demands of the bonus army and the present slash in pensions mark a definite turning point in the attitude of the government toward the soldier. I suggest further that this change will compel us to create a new status for industry in wartime. We will no longer be able to say that every returned soldier will be a permanent charge on the government, we will not dare to make promises. And, that being the case, we will have to promise the soldier that, since he will not profit from the war no other man will profit. The connection is not a logical one, perhaps; it has nothing to do with economics. But it is psychologically correct. The soldier, sent to war without the implied promise of protection for the rest of his life, will ask, before he goes, that no man shall profit from his danger.

No Patrioteering

On the whole this is an advantage. The time of the volunteer patriot army has gone; war has become too complex for that and there are no more civilians. So the time of patrioteering may well go with it. War will be recognized as a regrettable, desperately dirty and dangerous business which has to be gone through and out of which no human being can gain. Propaganda may still flourish because human beings prefer an illusion to a fact; but there will be an end of the promises of heaven to those who survive the hell of war. And perhaps the anxiety of the profiteers will dwindle when the soldiers, through their proper representatives, say, "If I don't, neither will you." My only worry is whether those who have applauded the passage of the economy bill are aware of its consequences, not in the present emergency, but in the next enthusiasm for war.

Our Cousins

The war with Great Britain being still unthinkable, I offer the following, not as an item in world affairs, but as one of those things which suggest that we Anglo-Saxon Americans do not understand our Anglo-Saxon forbears. It is from "Man Hunters of Scotland Yard," by Arthur Fowler Neil, once a superintendent of the Criminal Investigation Department—the place from which all the great police detectives of English fiction come. Mr. Neil's grammar is odd and his style dull, but in spite of all temptations he remains an Englishman. He has arrested a gang of thieves and forgers and had to transfer them to another city:

"As always in circumstances of this description, I took pains to obviate any undue publicity, and asked the railway authorities to place a reserve carriage at their disposal. As no third-class carriage was available the railway people very generously gave me one in a first-class wagon, a concession for which, in the prisoners' interests, I was very grateful, especially as one of the men came from a good family."

The italics are mine. They would never have occurred to Mr. Neil who was taking a thief and forger on a train ride. After all, the man might have been not only of good family, but positively county; Dear old England!

"Turtle Neck" Pair Held as Suspects

Two members of Roxbury's "Turtle-Neck" gang were under arrest today following the finding of a bullet-riddled sedan in Bynner st., Roxbury.

The sedan is believed to be that at which Special Officers Joseph H. Curran and Leo V. Devlin fired shots at yesterday morning. Because the detained two are held only on suspicion, police withheld their names. The "Turtle-Neck" gang has been credited with scores of holdups during the past few weeks.

Shoe Workers Flay Ely Appointee

A resolution will be presented to Gov. Ely and the Executive Council today by representatives of Brockton shoe workers' unions condemning the Governor's reappointment of Edward Fisher, chairman of the State Board of Arbitration and Conciliation.

Union leaders asserted that Fisher was unfair to organized labor and that his decisions were based on personal opinions rather than upon the facts presented before the board.

Dearest Anne:

March is blowing itself away! It's just a great show-off anyhow with its blustery winds, for well we know that back of it all there is the soft, sweet Springtime—and those wonderful new clothes! Aren't you just longing to get into some of those tempting new togs being shown in the windows? I am! We're only to visit the shops, to see on every hand tempting things that we won't be able to resist. The nice part about it, this Spring, is that we don't have to resist them, for prices were never so low! First of all I saw—

SAMPLE DRESSES $2.49-$4.49!

The New York Dress Mfg. Co. has determined that their values shall be even more talked about! They are now featuring dresses, mostly samples, made to sell at three and four times the price of $2.49 and $4.49! In all sizes from 12 to 60. All the new styles—all the new colors and all the newest materials! If you can duplicate the dress you buy there in any other retail store, at the same price, they will refund the money and let you keep the dress free! You must see their lovely, luxuriant Spring suits and coats marked at only $7.95. The New York Dress Mfg. Co.'s only store is located on the second floor of 515 Washington St., near West St.

New Spring $1 Crepe Turbans $1

Smart women are flocking to The Boston Wholesale Millinery for these chic rough crepe turbans sketched for you. They come in all the newest colors, including the popular Eleanor Blue. All headsizes. You will find several fascinating styles to choose from all marked at this one low price—$1. You can afford one to match every costume. The Boston Wholesale Millinery is on the third floor of the Blake Building, 59 Temple Place.

Bridal Gown and Veil $12.50!

This Spring clever brides will buy their wedding gowns at Mendelsohn's—for they are featuring, in a special sale, charming brand new bridal gowns and veils at the astounding price of $12.50. They are gowns that were made to sell at a much much higher price. Mendelsohn's is that charming shop that rents new and used bridal gowns and veils—bridesmaids outfits and evening gowns. Right now they are revising their stock of slightly used evening gowns and some are marked as low as $1. Mendelsohn's is at 59 Temple Place, 5th floor.

Of Course, It's From F. P. O'Connor's!

Choosing your Spring coat is bound to be an adventure—a glorious adventure in individuality if you go to F. P. O'Connor's! The coat sketched, priced at $95, is a superb fashion—individually and luxuriously trimmed with finest quality Platinum Fox! The fabric is an exquisite "Smola"—a lovely, soft, new weave. The color heavenly Delphina blue! It has entrancingly smart lines with a tier collar of Platinum Fox. You'll adore it! O'Connor's have a most unusual selection of Spring coats that are quite apart from the commonplace, marked at from $19.75 to $95. The F. P. O'Connor Corp. is at 350 Boylston St.

THE REALISTIC PERMANENT, $6!

Just a few years ago the Mary Belle Shop charged $20 for this very same Realistic Permanent you pay $6 complete for today! The Realistic Method gives you a deep, lasting permanent—more flattering—more beautiful than any you have ever enjoyed. Miss Leighton's many years' experience assure you of satisfaction. Try the new Bal-Pru Oil Shampoo, with a finger or marcel wave—now only $1.50! The Mary Belle Shop is in the Mark Cross Bldg., 145 Tremont St., Suite 601. Telephone Liberty 7014.

Superfluous Hair

You surely don't want to be one of those sorry people whose friends say—"Yes, she's pretty, but—that awful superfluous hair!" Why doesn't she have it removed? Why doesn't she make an appointment with Miss Mollie Rapport, that competent electric needle specialist whose work is so dependable? Miss Mollie Rapport, endorsed by doctors, handles single and multiple electric needles with the skill of an expert. This painless—permanent method is really not expensive. Why not see Miss Rapport today? You may consult her about your case without obligation. Mollie Rapport is at 125 Tremont St., Room 310. Hancock 7286.

Maternity Frocks

THERE ARE HATS

and hats—but here is one that can hold up its head (and yours, too!) with the best of them! It's as new as the minute! So gay—so flattering—and the flick of a veil across the eyes is utterly irrestible. And it's only $3.75! A girl can do with a great many hats these days—and one of the simplest things to do about that is to choose them at Peter Flynn's—where every smart line—every new color and dozens of new fabrics and straws are shown in a special group—$3.75. The Peter L. Flynn Co. is at 164 Tremont St.

Eugene Waves, $6!

Hollywood Cone Winders

You will have the most adorable little ringlets when your hair comes off the Hollywood Winder which shapes as it waves. NO finger wave lotion is needed—this wave can be set with water! Lillian Cunningham selects the winder according to the hair texture, and by this method bleached, dyed and fine hair can be given a natural, lovely, soft wave. Inecto Notox tinting. Special—Shampoo and Wave, $1.00! 20 years' experience. Lillian Cunningham, 159A Tremont St., over St. Clair's, Hancock 5463.

Don't Let

Superfluous hairs mar an otherwise perfect complexion. Have Miss Roche, well known Electrolysis specialist with physicians' references, remove this horrid growth, safely, painlessly and permanently with her ultra modern multiple electric needle equipment. Consultation with Miss Roche is free of charge. Miss Roche, 230 Boylston St., Rm. 404, Ken. 9418.

RANSOM FREES KIDNAPED BOY

Warren, O., March 27 (AP) — After eight days in the hands of kidnapers who threatened him with death if he attempted to escape, 15-year-old Peter Meyers, Jr., of Masury, near here, was restored unharmed to his father yesterday.

Blindfolded, the father was driven in his own auto for several hours by a man he refused to a lonely country road between Akron and Youngstown. There, in the darkness early yesterday, the boy, also blindfolded, was brought in another auto and delivered to him.

The elder Meyers, who operates the Gray Wolf Tavern near Sharon, Pa., on the Ohio side of the line, told Sheriff Roy S. Hardman of Trumbull County he paid $300 ransom.

Federal authorities investigating the case said, however, they doubted some of the details of Meyers' description of the boy's return, and expressed opinion he was shielding the kidnapers in fear of further violence against his family.

The father told Sheriff Hardman the kidnapers asked a large sum and agreed to reduce the amount when he told them, through a "friend" who acted as intermediary, he was unable to pay.

Meyers said he paid the ransom and was taken in his own car, blindfolded, to the scene of the meeting by the intermediary whom he described as "a friend." There he was ordered to get out of the car and to remove the blindfold.

"Look straight ahead and you will see your son," Meyers quoted the intermediary. He asserted he saw the boy standing in front of a second car, but that the lights of both cars blinded him so that he could not see the abductors.

Meyers told the sheriff he was blindfolded again and that a towel was placed over the boy's eyes.

"We were told to stay quiet for a few minutes," he said. "Then we heard the kidnapers' car pulling away."

The father and son then drove homeward in Meyers' car.

Cupid Loses Wellesley Police as Aid in Heart Affairs

Times are troublous these early mornings for the boy friends of Wellesley girls.

It seems that police of that town are much perturbed over the last minute rushes of escorts to deposit their fair burdens at dormitory doors before the 1 a. m. "deadline."

But such an excuse doesn't go any more, according to the edict of the law's motorcycle riders.

The first victim of the drive happened to be Charles H. Brickley, 20, of Dean rd., Brookline, a Harvard student. Motorcycle Officer Thomas E. Shea reported he not only caught Brickley driving at 80 miles an hour, but after his license had expired and—most annoying of all—in flagrant disregard of said officer's signal to stop.

Several nights ago another young man was halted by Shea with still 15 minutes to go before the deadline.

"No need of such speed. It's only quarter of one," argued Shea.

"Yes," replied the swain, "but it will take us 15 minutes to say good-night."

GIFT WIDOW TO FACE COURT

Mrs. Florence Hascall, of Bay State rd., Back Bay, must appear in Superior court within 10 days to answer to an indictment in connection with the alleged "Gift Family" swindle as a result of the report of Medical Examiner Timothy Leary on her condition.

Attorneys for Mrs. Hascall had declared she was too ill to appear and Dist. Atty. oFley therefore ordered the examination by Dr. Leary. The latter declared her condition was not too serious for her to appear.

Here's One Motorist That Is Due for a Happy Surprise

Sandwiched in with scores of "call down" letters, notices of suspended licenses and other grief that comes from the automobile registry, a new and unusual missive is due to waft within the next few days.

It will be a round of superlatives for an autoist who draws the praise instead of the ire of Registrar Morgan T. Ryan.

Said motorist, according to a report to Ryan, halted his black sedan for several minutes yesterday at Dudley and Nonquit sts., Dorchester, while three bewildered children regained composure and crossed Dudley st. in safety. A hasty motorist might have killed one or all three, the letter pointed out.

"Here is one case where I am going to be tickled to death to write an operator a letter of commendation. I wish I could write more," said Registrar Ryan.

THE VOICE OF BROADWAY

By LOUIS SOBOL

Down Memory Lane!

(With Norma Shearer)

The first person to make an indelible impression on me was Florenz Ziegfeld—for two reasons. Because he was the first famous person I had ever met—and because of his never-changing charm and graciousness to everyone.

My mother and sister and I had come to New York from Montreal, where I was born, determined to make names for ourselves in the big city. I was armed with a letter of introduction to Ziegfeld from a casual friend in Montreal. So our first day in New York the three of us descended upon the Great Glorifier.

The moment we were in his presence terror smote me. I couldn't think of just why we had come—I could neither sing nor dance, and motion pictures were my ambition. I couldn't think of a word to say to him, but he was kindly and gentle. He asked us if we had ever seen a Follies, and when we replied in the negative told us he would give us three seats for that night.

Never will I forget the trill of watching that first Follies! Marilyn Miller was the star, and to me she seemed the most glamorous person in the world. Later, coincidence would have it that another great thrill was to come to me through Mr. Ziegfeld. About two years ago Mr. Thalberg and I were in New York and we went to see the last Follies that Ziegfeld ever produced. As we entered the theater Mr. Ziegfeld saw us and sent word backstage to Harry Richman, who was the star of that show.

So during the performance Mr. Richman introduced me to the audience. And it seemed unbelievable to me that this public introduction was being accorded to the same scared girl who had gone to see her first Follies through the kindness of Mr. Ziegfeld less than 10 years before.

But to go back to those first lean years in New York. When I first met Mr. Ziegfeld he had no place for me. So I made the rounds of the motion picture studios and at last got my first motion picture work. It was as an extra in a picture in which Olive Thomas was the star. To aid the family finances I posed for commercial photographers between picture jobs.

After I had been in New York six months I received a wire from Ziegfeld offering me a job in one of his choruses, but I had gotten the "feel" of pictures by that time and thought it better not to try another field. However, I've always had a secret regret that I am not one of that glamorous Follies alumnae.

During my early picture work I appeared in pictures featuring Alice Joyce, Corinne Griffith, Constance Talmadge, and one of my biggest thrills was when I did an extra bit in "The Restless Sex," which starred Marion Davies.

At that time one of the "big romances" of the film world was that of Dorothy Gish and Robert Harron. They were making a picture on a stage adjoining the "'Way Down East" set and everyone in the studio used to watch with interest the tender way they looked at each other, the way they were together every moment between scenes.

While I was working in New York I received my first offer to go to the Coast. It was from Universal, and later I was to learn that it was instigated by a young man named Irving Thalberg, Carl Laemmle's assistant at that time. He had been watching my work and thought I showed possibilities.

However, before negotiations could be consummated Mr. Thalberg left Universal and the deal fell through. But wthin the next two weeks I received an offer from Louis B. Mayer Productions and started for the Coast. (Mr. Thalberg had joined the Mayer company and was responsible for this offer, too.)

On the day I arrived in Hollywood, my mother and I went out to meet Mr. Thalberg and Mr. Mayer. When the telephone girl announced us, a quiet, very young man came out to greet us. I thought it was an office boy taking us in to see Mr. Thalberg. But to our surprise, he led us into an offce and seated himself calmly behind the executive desk.

At that time Louis B. Mayer Studios adjoined the studio used by B. P. Schulberg. And Clara Bow had just arrived in Hollywood to work for that organization. So, Clara Bow and I started our first pictures at the same time, on adjacent lots. Her first film was "Maytime," and I remember the inter-studio gossip that proclaimed her a new "find."

Shortly after I arrived in Hollywood, Louis B. Mayer consolidated with the Goldwyn Company, forming the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Company. My first role with that organization was in "He Who Gets Slapped," opposite Lon Chaney.

Lon Chaney was one of the most remarkable persons I have ever known. Working with him was an education for any actress. He had a beautiful soul.

It was just about that time that Mr. Thalberg and I began to go together and when I completed making "Old Heidelberg," opposite Roman Novarro, we were married.

My first film after my marriage was "The Actress," which was one of the last silent pictures. One of the most important occurrences on the lot was the arrival of Greta Garbo from Sweden, which had taken place during those years. She is indeed a remarkable person.

Now Irving, Irving, Jr., and I are bound for Europe for a vacation and when we return, I hope many more interesting pictures—and many more interesting memories—will be waiting for me.

It's Joan for One Out of Every 3 Girls Born in Medford

One out of every three girl babies born in Medford, or born to Medford parents outside of Medford during the last year, was named Joan, a check-up of the birth list has revealed. The check-up was made by City Clerk Charles A. Winslow.

There were approximately 1400 babies born in Medford or to Medford parents and a little more than half of them were girls, so that 250 new Joans have arrived to be listed some day in the Medford directory. In most instances Joan was the first name. The second most popular name was Patricia. Usual names, such as Mary and Elizabeth, were relegated to the rear by the Joans and Patricias.

The good old names of John and William fought a close battle for supremacy to lead in the boys' names, but the name Francis as a middle name outnumbered any other by a wide margin. A large portion of the boy babies were named after their fathers, the percentage of Juniors being far in advance of those in any other year.

Walker Deplores Attacks on Jews

Cannes, France, March 27 (AP)—James J. Walker, former mayor of New York, commenting on protests in New York against reports of mistreatment of Jews in Germany, said:

"It is a pity and disgrace that the fienish hand of religious intolerance has been raised in their country."

Sweet and Low in the key of G★

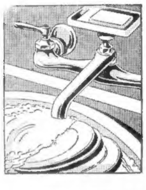
★ GAS! MANY a recipe says "simmer gently." If you use gas, you can leave the pot simmering for hours at a time, while you teach the children their songs, or do anything at all except putter about the kitchen.

Gas, the fuel of a thousand heats, gives you freedom. You can turn the flame down to any amount you please, and go away, absolutely sure that the heat will never vary. The unwatched pot need never boil! Though simmering is easy on any gas range, it is especially perfect on the new ranges. But whether it's for simmering, for slow boiling, or for vigorous boiling, gas gives you infinite and instantaneous control of heat.

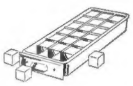
NO WASTE
Remember that gas is the wasteless fuel. Turn it off and the flame goes out instantly; no heat is wasted when heat is not needed. And gas leaves nothing to be disposed of.

Modern gas ranges have automatic time and temperature controls. You can put the whole meal in the oven, set the dials, and let everything cook unwatched, while you do other things. Go out for a ride. See a movie. Do anything you want. There are even models with double ovens, so you can cook the meat in the one oven and bake biscuits or shortcake in the other.

Cooking with gas is a joy, not a job. Modern gas ranges make it so. If you have not seen or used a modern gas range, you have a treat in store. Besides ranges, there are many other automatic gas appliances that give you new leisure, new perfection of results, new economy. See the nearest office and discover how much gas can give you in safety, economy, convenience, time saving, and downright pleasure.



SOAP'S PARTNER
For easy dishwashing you need not only soap, but hot water to soften and loosen the grease and give the soap a chance. An automatic gas water heater shortens dishwashing time and effort.



SILENT COLD
Gas refrigerators burn a tiny, absolutely silent flame. Its heat is turned into cold, providing plenty of ice cubes, and correct refrigeration that saves food safely and at low cost.

COATS
Important Values!
$29.75
Rare indeed are such charming models—let alone their being such marvelous values. Many are beautifully glorified with Scott Furs — included are all the wanted materials in a host of new patterns for Spring.
You don't have to pay cash!
Select your Coat, Suit, Dress or Furs, make a small deposit, and wear them home. Enjoy small weekly or monthly payments while wearing them by using the Scott Unique Payment Club, the only one in New England. No extra or carrying charges for this service.
DRESSES
of Sprightly Style
$8.95
Pleated touches on skirt and sleeve—necklines that tie in jabot ends. Shallow fluted edges for trimmings—those are some of fashion's highlights. Colors include the softer shades, as well as the very smart Navy.
SUITS
That Denote Spring
$29.75
Many are quite sincerely mannish in their attitude—others, not so sophisticated, show interesting new-season neckline treatments. Lovely Spring materials and colorings mark the New Era.

RADIO WORD WRANGLE FEATURED BY CONTESTANT'S SUIT FOR PRIZE ANOTHER WON

Courts Need Dictionaries Along With Their Law Books

By N. F. T.

There just isn't any way to figure how many times I have wondered how many people compile lists of words in response to various radio contest announcements. About a thousand or so would be an extremely conservative estimate. Today for the first time, I am indulging extra stretches of mental speculation, wondering what the total number of these words would be if every entry were struck off for addition by some certified public accountant.

Bright minds are at present busy down New York way, working over certain defense and prosecution evidence submitted to a municipal court there in Manhattan. One Gotham man claims he should have won a thousand dollar first award with his list of 1177 words. It seems another resourceful gentleman from some rural Illinois community copped the coveted coin by shaping only 1100 figures of speech.

FABULOUS FIGURES

Defense attorneys are said to stand on the assumption that "quality counts to an equal degree with quantity," while the radio competition backers, perhaps better known to loudspeaker patrons as sponsors, confess that ever so many folks have forwarded close to 4000 words. All of these are built from a given number of letters displayed on a specified product wrapper. It is further stated by said summoned sponsor that should the dissatisfied New York man score the objective point of his suit, then some 153,000 more people might likewise call loudly for $1000 each.

James Melton the network tenor, now has a song dedicated to him and written by our talented Treasury Secretary, Mr. Woodin. It's called "Gypsy Romance" and Jimmy says he'll sing it soon, as an acknowledgement of the honor . . . Kate Smith was rushed to a hospital on Friday and remained there over the week-end, suffering from blood poinoning in her legs. Kate may not make her regular CBS appearance tomorrow night as a result . . . Eddie, who is our ambitionus "colyum" office boy, wants to team up with Ed (Yankee Philosopher) Young. He even applies for that partnership "mike" privelege with "Two EDS are better than one" for a theory . . . No better dramatic program ever hit the air waves anywhere, anytime, than the stirring "Western" half hour heard last Friday night (WNAC) between 8:30 and 9 o'clock, replacing those magazine news plays. Such studio realism is rare, with all the progress credited to radio theatricals . . .

Morris Puts Orpheum Back in Vaudeville Ranks Friday; Jobs for Many Promised

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

It was tried and found wanting. And that being the case, the Orpheum Theater, long a bulwark of good variety as well as pictures, will next Friday return to its old program policy of mixing vaudeville with its screen presentations. Rumors of this change have been in the air for several weeks; now it is made official by Manager Victor Morris, whose affection for stage shows at his theater never wavered during the few weeks that speculation in day and date picture offerings with Loew's State has been in effect.

Under the new arrangement pictures showing at the State will not reach the Orpheum screen until one or two weeks later.

Victor Morris

It is a return to the policy which made the Orpheum a center of better vaudeville for more than 20 years. There has been a feeling that this old playhouse never should have changed its course and relied upon pictures exclusively. It had already been established as a vaudeville house of consequence, rivaling in the old days the more widely known, perhaps, but not more generously patronized B. F. Keith Theater. For years these temples of variety divided what was known as the downtown deluxe business. There is something of coincidence in the fact that both Keith's and the Orpheum have tested the value of side-tracking vaudeville for films. Keith's made the first attempt, but soon returned to the old assorted program. Now the Orpheum concedes the futility of such sweeping changes and gracefully returns to the old and always happy order of things.

It may not be overlooked that the return of the Orpheum to vaudeville and, possibly, other stage shows, brings about economic benefits that cannot be ignored. There will be an addition of nearly 100 extra persons to the Orpheum payroll. We have Mr. Morris' word for that. These new employes will be represented largely by musicians and stage hands. An enlarged orchestra is being organized and rehearsed for service in a pit that has been empty for three months. Other additions to the working crew is also made necessary, says Mr. Morris. The policy changes also include a revision downward in prices. What these may be are not yet made known by the management.

RATTLING THE SKELETON

Lee Morrison, general manager at the Copley, deserted the classic halls of Harvard, when 19, to become an actor. While conceding certain artistic limitations, he still boasts of his one great achievement. He played the role of Biondello in "The Taming of the Shrew" in support of the late Kyrle Bellew and was not dismissed from the company.

At a last-minute decision, the management of the Copley called off the performances of "The Red Mill," previously announced for this week. The house will be dark for one week. The reason glibly advanced for this sudden closing is that the exigencies of stage rehearsals and scenic preparations for the production of "Dick Whittington" next Monday require the unrestricted use of the stage. "Dick Whittington" is a musical extravaganza sponsored and written by Mrs. Larz Anderson and Mrs. Grace Warner Gulesian.

Tops the Bill

Lovish Musical on Modern Screen

"High Gear," new film at the Modern, serving as co-feature with the gorgeously produced "42nd Street," is an interesting photoplay. Playing the title role as "High Gear" Sherrod, is James Murray, who presents probably one of the finest performances of his career. He is ably seconded by pretty Joan Marsh and 11-year-old Jackie Searl. The cast in general presents a well rounded performance, including as it does, Eddie Lambert, famous stage and screen comic; Theodor von Eltz, Ann Brody, comedienne; Mike Donlin, veteran baseball star; Lee Moran, comedian, and Marion Sayers, Winifred Drew, Gordon Demaine and Alan Cavan.

"42nd Street" is one of the big pictures of the year, and is one of the most lavish of film musicals.

Throughout the concert the master played nobly, a few mannerisms aside. And the audience applauded just as wildly as if it had been the usual capacity crowd.

The new Free Rental Bureau at R. H. White Co. is designed to give complete information regarding all rentals advertised in the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser classified columns—location, nearness to transportation, schools, churches, theaters and garages.

"King Kong" Proves Best of All Films in Cinema Ingenuity; Strangest of Spectacles

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

King Kong of the Jungle is dead—long live "King Kong" of the cinema! For the picture of that title, now featured at RKO B. F. Keith's, tops all the phantasms in film, past and present. It is the peak of them all in cinema ingenuity. It is the cream of them all in lens action. Uncanniest of all themes in conception, it conjures up what one may call a demon drama. As entertainment it is the swellest hokum imaginable, lending itself to hilarity and horror, thrills and chills, fears and cheers, and as exciting in some moments as it is provocative of laughter in others.

For us "King Kong" is now history. We sat in with the midnight premiere audience, filling the de luxe house, and sharing in one of the screen treats of the season. Now we can sit back and think it over. The marvel of it all is the direction of Merian Cooper and Ernest Schoedsack. They have built up the strangest of all spectacles, the most spectral of all melodramas. They have given the unbelievable, amazing realism, and by the sly trickery of their camera magic, have given the mythical the very breath of life.

Ernest B. Schoedsack

"Here, human beings don't count, save to appear puny in comparison. Kong is a Gulliver among these Lilliputians; their talk and their deeds and their words turn thin and pale. The giant Gorilla is the hero. He is the greatest of all the cave-man lovers. He defends his woman against primeval beasts such as you haven't seen since that other film fantasy, "The Lost World," which was childish compared to this. What creatures! What antediluvian antics! How savagely they fight! How like men they wrestle! Zbyszko in his prime had nothing on the huge ape hammer-locking the tyrannosaurus rex (what a name for a defeated mat man!) Sandow was a weakling compared to Kong battling the pterodactyl swooping off with the beauteous Fay Wray! Never did human hero fight more valiantly for his lady love—so hail to Kong, the mightiest of film lovers!

These sequences are like frenzied dreams, but they are not without their comedy. The bout with the dinosaur brings gales of laughter, and makes one think that the producers have surprised themselves by turning out one of the biggest mirth pictures of the year, when they intended, perhaps, to make, first and foremost, a thoroughly dyed-in-the-wool weird film thriller.

Briefly, the Gorilla is captured by members of a motion picture company, and is shackled and brought to Broadway. There he escapes, finds the one woman he desires, and, at the top of the tallest of buildings, defies his pursuers. Man, gun, and airplane give battle; and, let us tell you, that Kong is as heroic in death as Leonidas of old. Too, in this scene, as everywhere else, the cameras do their duty so well that they leave you open-eyed with wonder.

Kong may be a figment of the mind, but he is a glorious creation. He is unforgettable; he may be dead on screen, but long will he live in your memory!

'Mussolini Speaks'

"Mussolini Speaks," a Columbia Picture, will have a gala Hollywood opening at the Tremont next Friday evening at 8:20. There will be lights and a band and many distinguished persons present.

After the opening, "Mussolini Speaks," will be presented twice daily, afternoons at 2:30, evenings at 8:20, all seats reserved. The sale for this engagement opens Wednesday.

Keaton-Durante Film on Bill at Bowdoin

The Bowdoin for the first half of this week has a bill of excellence made up of film hits and a vaudeville show of worth. One of the pictures is "What! No Beer?" The companion movie is "The Woman Accused." The comedy feature is "Fallen Arches." There is a bill of six vaudeville acts headed by the original Hollywood movie star "doubles."

Russian Film

The Fine Arts will take its patrons on a sight-seeing trip to Moscow beginning today, arriving on May Day for the greatest Russian celebration of the year.

Intimate glimpses of world famous characters, such as Maxim Gorki, Joseph Stalin, Nikolai Kalenin and Gen. Voroshiloff are included.

Clara Bow's Next Film Will Be "Sandy Hooker," With Raoul Walsh as Director

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

(Copyright, 1933, by Universal Service, Inc.)

Los Angeles, March 27—A new slim Clara Bow will emerge from her retirement in Nevada and read the treatment of "Sandy Hooker," prepared for her by Rian James, Brooklyn columnist. Clara has already passed judgment on "Sandy Hooker," purchased for her by Winfield Sheehan and Sam Rork.

Louella O. Parsons

'Tis the very same play that starred Lenore Ulric on the stage a few seasons ago under the management of Messmore Kendall, written by Charles Bickford and Sam Shipman. It has Bowish touches and should be all right for the vivacious Clara.

Fox is going ahead producing "Sandy Hooker" in a big way, with Raoul Walsh, one of their ace directors, in charge of production.

Chatter in Hollywood:

To go to China or not to go to China? That is the question that has been agitating Gary Cooper. He has a holiday coming to him and he is invited to join Douglas Fairbanks, Sr., in China May 1. Doug has some golf tournaments in Italy before his trip to China as well as a plan to visit India. Vacation or no vacation Gary is eager to do "One Sunday Afternoon." Hear that Ernst Lubitsch wanted Jack Oakie for the part but since "One Sunday Afternoon" is not to be a Lubitsch picture I cannot see that Gary will lose it.

A Line or Two:

Can you believe that Mary Kornman, little blonde girl who played the vamp in "Our Gang" comedies for so long, has grown up? Seems only yesterday that Mary had all the boys in "Our Gang" pictures dancing attendance on her small self. You'll see her in "College Humor" opposite Jack Oakie and Richard Arlen. Hugo Reisenfeld will soon be headed in the direction of Hollywood. He leaves April 1 to provide the musical setting for Sergei Eisenstein's "Thunder Over Mexico." Scoring pictures is right up Hugo's alley and he will probably do a swell job. What's this I hear that Fredric March is going to play the circus barker in "The Great Magoo"? We [illegible] we have always said Fredric is versatile. Irene Browne who has just done a fine piece of work in "Peg O' My Heart" has been signed by the Fox company for "Berkeley Square."

Snapshots of Hollywood

Old demon flu has JOEL McCRAE in its grasp. He was unable to officiate as master of ceremonies at the "King Kong" opening. FAY WRAY celebrated the opening with an after-theater supper at her home. What's happened to DICK POWELL? Mary was at the fights with JACK OAKIE one night this week. Is she popular? RAPPAPORT, famous European artist, guest of honor at a tea given by BEBE DANIELS. Her portrait painted with her daughter, and a portrait of her grandmother alone were on exhibition. What now, BOOTS MALLORY and CY BARTLETT at the Brown Derby. Where, oh where is JIMMY DUNN? MRS. HARRY BEAUMONT, who as HAZEL DALY was a rival to GLORIA SWANSON in beauty and talent, forgetting the depression with a luncheon. Mary, M. G. M.'s there. That's all today. See you tomorrow.

Kreisler Plays in Finest Vein

AUTHOR KILLED WITH 3 OTHERS

Fort Lauderdale, Fla., March 27 (AP)—Christian Channing Gross, soldier, author and colorful figure of the American Diplomatic Service, was killed here in an auto accident which also claimed the lives of his two small children and his mother, Mrs. Natalie Gross of Chicago.

His father, Charles W. Gross, was injured seriously and was brought to a hospital here.

Christian Gross, who was 37 years old, was identified by papers in his pocket and his father confirmed the identification. The children killed were Peter, 10, and Barbara, 8.

A car in which they were en route from Palm Beach to Miami skidded off the Federal highway north of Fort Lauderdale and overturned, crushing the occupants.

Rattlesnake Meat
—For Those Who Want It

Please pass the RATTLESNAKE!

SOMEBODY summoned a lot of nerve to swallow the first raw oyster. And the man who ate the first snail undoubtedly hesitated. But for pure, unalloyed gastronomical imagination, the first prize goes to George K. End, the man who introduced rattlesnake meat.

As vividly chronicled in a full page article in The American Weekly of November 27th last, Mr. End, of Arcadia, Florida, took that heroic step about two years ago after helping his two small sons kill and skin a rattler.

> "The reptile's flesh was a pale salmon pink, looked inviting, and Mr. End decided to try eating a bit of it as an experiment.
> "He was pleasantly surprised to find the meat was tender and of excellent flavor. A little later on, at an American Legion convention in Tampa, he served a quantity of it, and everyone pronounced it good.
> "That set Mr. End to thinking. If he and his family liked it and his friends, the former soldiers, liked it, perhaps there was an opportunity here which had been overlooked. And thus a new food for the American dinner table made its appearance."

Thus ran the story in The American Weekly which, true to its policy of presenting new and unusual facts, told about this amazing new food industry in an article, entitled "Ha! Something New for the Dinner Table."

The Price Rivals Caviar

Replete with pictures, this article set forth the whole story of the Floridian Food Products Corp., which captures, cooks and cans Diamondback rattlesnake for human consumption and sells the meat at a price that rivals caviar.

A small volume of business had been developed up to the time this story appeared in The American Weekly. Only a few people knew of the new rattlesnake meat delicacy. But within a week after the publication of the article, things began to hum at the snake cannery.

Hardly had this Mighty Magazine reached its 5,000,000 homes when presto! the bewildered Mr. End was swamped with orders. "Checks, money orders and coins came popping out of envelopes," Mr. End writes.

Here was another tribute to the widespread reader interest in The American Weekly; further convincing evidence that it is seen, read and believed; for letters, telegrams, telephone calls and cables flooded into Arcadia demanding immediate shipment of rattlesnake meat.

Brings International Attention

The entire country was represented by the response and there was a generous sprinkling of orders from Canada and abroad. Several trade publications requested information and printed stories. In other words, The American Weekly had brought international attention to the rattlesnake farm in Arcadia, Florida.

Orders came from wholesale houses, doctors, lawyers, society matrons, tycoons and hundreds of just plain Americans.

Every can of rattlesnake meat was shipped from the warehouse and the company was forced to hire additional rattlesnake hunters.

Rattlesnake may never be a serious competitor of the stockyards, but somewhere in this amazing story is a moral for an advertiser who is looking for action.

It looks like conclusive proof of the argument we have been driving home for years: that* the place to get action is in this Mighty Magazine which reaches more people than any other publication in the world; that this magazine has the most circulation because it is the most interesting magazine in the world; that its readers represent every walk of life and have faith in The American Weekly—enough faith to eat canned rattlesnake if necessary, to prove it.

WHERE THIS MAGAZINE GOES

The American Weekly is the largest magazine in the world. It is distributed through 17 great Sunday Newspapers. In 558 of America's 995 towns and cities of 10,000 population and over, The American Weekly concentrates 70% of its circulation.

And, in addition, more than 1,750,000 families in thousands of other communities, large and small, regularly buy and read The American Weekly.

This advertisement is published to inspire presidents, sales managers and other executives interested in learning of unusual accomplishments even in times like these. A copy of the complete article will be sent, upon request, on business stationery.

Scotch Law of 'No Treat' May Be Key to Liquor Problems

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

R. E. ROGERS

On Friday morning last I dropped into the Gardiner Auditorium for a few minutes between a university extension class in Boston and a Technology class in Cambridge. I wanted to listen to the hearing on the Warren bill for the regulation of beer and liquor. Mr. Conrad W. Crooker, counsel for the Liberal Civic League, had the floor.

I had been listening only for a few minutes when I became aware, with a certain mild astonishment, that Mr. Crooker and a member of the committee were bickering over what I had meant by a certain phrase in an article I wrote for this column several weeks ago. I didn't exactly want Mr. Crooker to get heckled for my sins, as he seemed to be getting heckled, nor did I want to step between "the fell incensed points of mighty opposites." Besides, I hadn't time. A class-room bell is as merciless as a radio announcer when time is concerned So I kept still and presently left the room and the wrangle

Treating Days Would Be Ended

It is probably too late to do any good, but if there really is any difficulty about what I said I should like to clear it up. The article in question had to do with the model bill proposed by Mr. Crooker's association to the Warren commission. Mr. Crooker said on Friday that he believed that I agreed with it on the whole. That is exactly what I was trying to convey in my weak and inarticulate way.

What I did differ with was the Civic League's attempt to mask the return of the saloon by calling it a beer parlor or a beer tavern. As I have said frequently, I believe that there should be places where the man in the street can get beer without all the paraphernalia and expense of a restaurant. I said that the attempt to make believe that the institution was changed by changing the name was "dishonest." Since Mr. Crooker had to suffer for that word "dishonest," I had better soften it. Say, disingenuous. Say that it is a piece of casuistry. In short, it is a red herring across the trail

But on Friday Mr. Crooker added something which was new to me, which I had not understood was a part of his policy. He said that it was a part of the Civic League's original proposal to forbid "treating."

Now that is important! There is the crux of the whole business. Otherwise the question of whether beer is to be served to people standing up at a bar or sitting down at tables doesn't matter. The old valid argument against the saloon was this very matter of "treating."

Among a certain class of people it had come to be a custom, or rather a strict convention, that if six men came together into a saloon they must have six drinks apiece . . . plus one on the house There's where the money went, and the time, and the beer. That is where the opposition arose.

In the February "American Mercury" a very interesting and detailed article on the state of the drinking business in the British Isles says that in parts of Great Britain there are strict laws against treating. I assume that this applies not only to treating by the bartender but to ordering rounds of drinks by everybody in turn. My impression is that the law against treating is a Scotch law. Seriously, I mean. No joking. The Scotch are no fools

My contention is that if the Commonwealth will prohibit treating, it does not matter whether beer is served in a saloon or a tavern, at a bar or at tables. The essential difficulty and objection will have been met. If it shocks people to hear a saloon called a saloon, call it anything you like. Call it a Refreshmenting Emporium. And if people think a standing bar is immoral, put in deck chairs with awnings. But if the most characteristic American dining room is a cafeteria, why not have a beer cafeteria? a place the man in the street won't keep out of because he is afraid he will have to tip a waiter.

License Card Only for Hard Liquor

I am sorry to say that I couldn't stay at the hearing long enough to hear any discussion of the personal license card I seem to be pretty much alone in my opinion about that. Mr. Crooker calls it a dog collar. The newspapers have been pretty unfriendly to the idea But I dunno. I said at the beginning that it did not seem to me a bad idea. Since then it has been made plain that the provision will not apply to beers and wines sold over the counter in bottles or by the glass to be drunk on the premises

That means that the personal license card will apply only to purchasers of bottled spirits or to people in dry towns desiring express shipments. That being so, I repeat that it does not seem possible to me that any decent citizen will object to that simple provision. In fact, it is a protection and a guarantee to the decent citizen. It sets him apart definitely from the bird who can't hold his liquor—or doesn't care whether he does or not.

I feel strongly enough about it to say that I felt a sensible disappointment when I understood from the papers that Mr. Bentley Warren had said that he did not believe that such a license would ever be revoked for drunkenness. If Mr. Warren believes that, I see no reason for the card at all. It becomes a farce, a nullity. The only possible reason for the personal license is that it will enable society to deal adequately with persons who abuse their right to drink. Especially is it the only adequate means to deal with the serious problem of drunken driving. With his personal license revoked and his driving license revoked, the deliberate and repetitive drunk can't do much damage.

It is only fair to say, however, that the opponents to restriction and control have one high-power argument. The rising tide of conviction that had resulted in the beer bill and the repeal vote by the Congress was actually a protest against too great a restriction of personal liberty by legislation. That restriction resulted in universal nullification of the law, in organized lawbreaking on a mammoth scale

Difficult to Wean From Lawbreaking

The argument that state commission control will result in continued nullification and the perpetuation of the bootlegger and speakeasy is at bottom a very valid argument. It is psychologically sound, all the more so since people have got into the habit of lawbreaking and it is going to be difficult to wean them from it.

Since that is so the proponents of the Warren bill must listen seriously to the arguments against it. On the other hand, the objectors cannot be so blind as to believe that liquor virtually without control can be tolerated or even endured. The line of demarkation between possible liberty and possible control is a hair line. Either side of that line lies the possibility of disaster, because a system once adopted is hard to change. Intelligent compromise, a sincere attempt at reconciliation was never more needed. Laughter at the views of one's opponents doesn't help.

My Boy Franklin

As Told by His Mother To Isabelle Leighton and Gabrielle Forbush

How Roosevelt Helped Wilson Win Nomination; Assistant Secretary of the Navy

Mrs. James Roosevelt today continues her story from yesterday's Boston Sunday Advertiser. In that installment she told of Franklin's entry into politics, his breaking of the strong Republican machine in his senatorial district and of his election to the State Senate of New York. He did not welcome the hard struggle, but considered it his patriotic duty. "Big Tim" Sullivan was surprised, and when he inquired into the history of the "phenomenon" and found he was a relative of T. R., he said: "He's young yet. Hadn't we better drown him before he grows up?" Franklin's insurgents, as they were called, successfully kept Sheehan, Tammany candidate, from Congress. But eventually the breach was healed and Roosevelt settled down to a quieter life as senator

On the threshhold of politics Mr. Roosevelt as New York State Senator. (Wide World Photo.)

CHAPTER 9

DURING Franklin's first term in the Senate he took an active part in all branches of the work. He served as Chairman of the Forest, Fish and Game Committee and was a member of the Canals, Railways and Agricultural Committees besides. He had emerged victor in a controversy over a principle and had never failed to oppose an unworthy measure. All in all it had been a thrilling experience that had enriched his life, but the time had come, he felt, to turn once again to his business interests and the practice of law

A campaign for re-election beckoned alluringly but in 1912 he had put the idea definitely behind him. He had no sooner made his decision than a rumor reached him that "Boss" Murphy and his cohorts were just as well pleased to have him withdraw from the fray and that in any event they would oppose his renomination. His plans underwent an immediate change

Once more he took the stump, this time declaring himself for the continuance of the policies advocated in his initial campaign and asking the support of his constituents on the basis of performance rather than promise. While Franklin toured the district renewing acquaintances and making new friends, Eleanor and the children settled down at Hyde Park to await results Always a firm believer in the magic of the spoken word he [illegible] no opportunity of addressing crowds, however slim

Edited by MARGARET MATSON

ELASTICITY IS A QUALITY [illegible] human nature which we greatly admire. It's a trait that [illegible] be carried to an extreme where it becomes indecision and weakness but in its rightful state it is one of the greatest happiness-saving — not to say literally life saving — characteristics.

By elasticity we [illegible] open mindedness, broadmindedness [illegible]. It is a sort of mental "crouch" that allows us to [illegible] what [illegible] is necessary. It is [illegible] between [illegible] "bumps." It is [illegible] quickly to unexpected situations and [illegible] conditions. Few things happen exactly as [illegible]. [illegible] there are other human [illegible] wise person realizes this and [illegible]. We might take for illustration one of the most [illegible] that of two people meeting. [illegible] appoint [illegible] and [illegible]. Now there may be some [illegible] the world who [illegible] make others wait [illegible] to believe that [illegible]. Surely not all the people who get [illegible] deserve it. But how often you and I [illegible] little thing like that upset us. That's what we mean [illegible] the lack of it. We should be able and willing to [illegible] our plans to allow for reasonable variations. In bigger things, the same principle is true. To my perhaps [illegible] it does seem that the tragedies of life both large and small are due almost always to rigidity — to [illegible] clinging too closely to one idea, one purpose, one thing or one person—to the inability to adjust oneself to existing conditions. Isn't it true?

Elasticity has another angle also. It is the ability to stretch one's mind to embrace other points of view. It is the capacity for LISTENING. One explanation that is [illegible] advanced for President Roosevelt's [illegible] success is his genius for accepting the opinions of his close associates. It takes a big person to listen to others when he himself is in power. And it takes a big person to listen to the home folks and to the office force when they disagree with us.

We could go on at great length about these "elasticities" of one sort or another. But we [illegible] bore you. You know and I know that one of the primary reasons for our attempting to become better human beings is in order that we may live more harmoniously with our associates. Everything we can do to further that [illegible] adds just that much more to our and everyone's happiness.

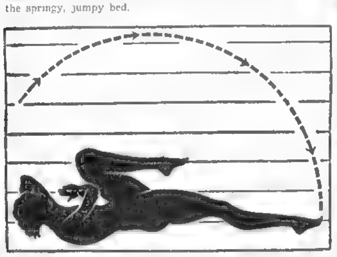
WE DO A LARGE part of our free-ing exercises lying on the solid floor.

The floor does not yield as the bed does. We feel more secure on the larger surface. We trust it more than we do the springy, jumpy bed.



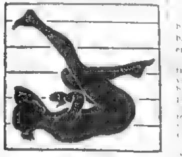
Bring the right knee close to the chest, then describe as large a circle as you can. Do this ten times with the right leg. You are looking straight down on the model in these pictures.

Then, too, the pull of gravity on the heart—lungs—stomach and digestive tract is much less in the horizontal position—than in the vertical position. With less gravity pull to overcome, there is no fear and [illegible] greater freedom of movement. Many adults still retain the first and exaggerated walk of infancy with the hollow back and large abdomen.

Muscle control [illegible] this difficulty is [illegible] developed [illegible].

Today's exercise stretches the back muscles up and down the full length of the [illegible]. It cramps the abdominal muscles thoroughly and helps to wear off the excess fat about the upper parts of the thighs.

The large leg circles done parallel to the floor give freedom to the hip and knee joints. This elasticity when carried over into the vertical walk is an [illegible] of the spine—and cultivating the valuable aid in reducing the age resilient walk of youth.



This is known as the sideward bicycle exercise. Lie on left side, left arm for a pillow, right arm as brace, both knees at chest to start.

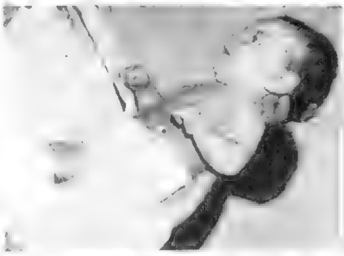
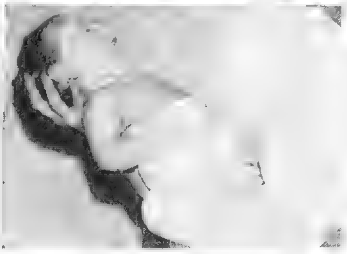
HERE ARE THE PROPER WAYS TO HOLD A BABY FOR SAFETY

Head, Neck and Back Are Well Supported, and Muscular Development Is Balanced in the Proper "Carries" for Small Infants



The Left Forward-Carry

In this position it is plain to see that Baby's right side is shortened and his left side lengthened. Baby enjoys being held this way, but again we think of balancing his muscular experiences. Pictures of George Armstrong, six weeks, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Armstrong.



The Right Forward-Carry

And we carry him in the same way on the other side. Here his body is in the same relation to the adult's body, but his left side is shortened and his right side lengthened. In both positions his head, neck and back are well supported.

'White Plague' Found to Be Curable

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

ANY OF my readers will recall the days when tuberculosis was known as the white plague.

Dr. Copeland

The disease was very prevalent particularly in the poor quarters of large cities. Little was known about its prevention and cure. But since the discovery of the germ of tuberculosis great strides have been made in our knowledge of the disease.

Many persons believe that tuberculosis is incurable. This is not true. It is now possible to cure many, indeed, most cases of this disease. Where cure is not possible, life can be prolonged and made more comfortable. Almost always early recognition of the disease insures prompt recovery.

Within recent years a new form of treatment for tuberculosis of the lungs has been perfected. This is the so-called pneumothorax treatment. It is of tremendous value in certain selected cases.

The treatment consists of collapsing the affected lung. This is accomplished by piercing through the pleura or lining of the chest cavity with a long needle and permitting the air within the lung to escape. As a result the lung is gradually collapsed. In order to prevent the lung from expanding air is pumped into the cavity outside of the collapsed lung. The process is repeated from time to time and is spoken of technically as a "refill."

The involved lung is observed by X-ray examinations and the progress is carefully checked. The sputum is repeatedly tested for germs of tuberculosis.

When the treatment is completed and cure made possible the refills are discontinued and the lung allowed to expand. No ill effects are observed.

Jealousy Is Often Killed by Humor

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

I was a widow at twenty eight when I married my second husband who is forty-three. We truly love each other but he is so jealous. We both love to dance once in a while, but he will not dance with any girl unless I ask him to and he expects the same sort of courtesy from me. But you know, Miss Fairfax that is kind of embarrassing. He [illegible] to make remarks if I should do this—dance with out his consent. Do you think it's the difference in our ages that makes him act this way.

A BRIDE.

Dear Bride—It will require considerable tact to meet this situation. And the best advice I can give you is to try and carry off the situation with a little good humor. When a man asks you to dance bring him up to your husband and say with all the [illegible] command "What do you think of this gentleman as a dance partner, John?" or something like that. But if you [illegible] this off and I'll admit a jealous man at a dance is a good deal of a handful—I really believe it might be better to quit dancing with other men, until your husband gets over being so jealous. After you've been married a little longer he may reform.

He's a Crossword Puzzle to Me"

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

Last summer I met a young man just about my own age. He seems rather indifferent, but we have been writing regularly since that time, as he lives in another city. The other night I met him for the first time since the vacation and we went out together.

But he's a cross-word puzzle to me. He sits with his hands folded in his lap and doesn't even attempt to hold my hand. I don't go in for "necking" on a large scale but I like to be appreciated and have my hand held in the movies. I know he likes me, but he just doesn't seem to know how to make dates or go around with a girl. He told me he was having a week's vacation from college soon, and he doesn't know how he's going to spend that. Was that a hint that he wanted to make a date with me? If I help him make dates, will it scare him away?

MODERN GIRL.

Dear Girl: If you are too modern, you may very well scare away this young man, who seems very well behaved to me. If you could see some of the letters that come to me, you would realize that not all young men like a girl to be too up and coming. He is one of this type. "Don't try to rush things" is my best advice.

Baked Shoulder From Dutch Recipe

By MARTHA LEE

From Martha Lee's Monday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB

OF COURSE you've noticed the attractive cash prizes that are being offered for recipes using a certain brand of smoked shoulder, and I imagine you've been going through your files trying to select just the one that will "bring home the bacon"—(speaking of smoked shoulder!)

The packers of these smoked shoulders say they are constantly receiving requests for new ideas for cooking smoked shoulder and how to bring new favorite recipes "out of hiding" is their problem. They are trying to solve it through this new shoulder recipe contest in which generous cash prizes are offered for the best recipes.

BAKED SHOULDER

This is an old Dutch recipe and gives an especially fine flavor to smoked shoulder. Place the shoulder in a baking dish and surround with milk (about one quart). Bake in a slow oven (300 deg.) for 1½ hours, basting frequently. By this time the milk has cooked down, leaving enough for basting.

Now spread prepared mustard over the ham and cover with brown sugar. Garnish with cloves. Return to oven, raise heat to 350 deg. and bake 1½ hours longer, basting occasionally.

P. S.—Spring classes in the Martha Lee Cooking School will open April 4 and 5, and it is not a bit early to send in YOUR enrollment for either the Tuesday evening classes, held at 8:30; or the Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. There is no charge whatsoever for these courses, held right here at 5 Winthrop sq.

Daily True Story

The Amateurs

It is not yet advisable to mention amateur dramatics to Algernon Bliss. For Mr. Bliss has heard all he cares to hear on that score. Too much, in fact. He worked for weeks—"slaved," he termed it—and then—

Mr. Bliss was the first to suggest that the members of the Greenhill Country Club should give an amateur play. An earnest young man without much sense of humor he was always fussing at people, trying to get them to do things when they much preferred to be left alone. But he did point out that some money might be raised to help pay off the club mortgage and so a dozen or so members allowed themselves to be coaxed and browbeaten into attending rehearsals.

Mr. Bliss selected the play, a comedy success of three or four years ago. Automatically he became director and everything else and his first task was to select the cast. Irene Carson was chosen to play the feminine lead—"that's because Bliss is sweet on her," the others said—and Harry Conway was finally picked as the male star.

A NOISY AFFAIR

The first rehersal was an informal, somewhat noisy affair, greatly to the annoyance of Mr. Bliss, who had called it after giving the cast time to study their parts. And, to make it worse, Harry Conway didn't show up. The rehersal went on, however, with Mr. Bliss reading Harry's lines and doing what the others called "yammer" at Irene.

At the second rehearsal Harry was present and things went a little better. But at the third Irene didn't appear, sending word that she had another engagement.

The rehearsals went on but it was on somewhat of a stagger system. For almost always someone was absent. Finally Mr. Bliss had what he considered an idea.

"I'll tell you what," he said to the cast one evening when they were all assembled. "It seems impossible to get all of you together at one time. But you have to rehearse, you just have to. So on nights when we don't have general rehearsals I'd suggest that those of you who have scenes together call at each other's homes and practice them. We can do a lot that way."

GOOD SUGGESTNON

After thinking the suggestion over Harry considered it was the best that Mr. Bliss had ever made. In fact he considered it so good that he was inclined to wonder how Mr. Bliss had ever happened to think of it. Even so, he acted on it and promptly.

Nearly every night he called at Irene's home to rehearse with her, for most of their scenes were together. Harry, as they say, put his heart into his work so much so that Irene finally said, "You don't have to be so [illegible] real about it."

"Why shouldn't I be real about it?" asked Harry. "That's the way I feel."

Irene said "Oh" and then hurriedly spoke of something else. But Harry continued to be "real" about it.

Meanwhile preparations for the play were going on, chiefly on the somewhat narrow shoulders of Mr. Bliss. He arranged for hiring the theater, for renting or painting the scenery, for borrowing stage furnishings, for printing tickets and selling them, for hiring costumes, for the thousand and one things that are incidental to even amateur theatrical performances.

Finally the day arrived. Mr. Bliss was at the theater early. He had called a final dress rehearsal for the morning and sighed wearily as, one after another, the members of the cast trouped in.

NO LEADING MAN?

"Come, come," said Mr. Bliss, standing in the center of the stage and clapping his hands. "Let's get started, please." He looked around. "Who isn't here?" he added.

Betty Smallwood came in as he spoke. Rather, she came running in and it took her a few moments to catch her breath, while Mr. Bliss regarded her with obvious disapproval. Finally she spoke.

"There isn't any use of holding the rehearsal, Mr. Bliss," she said.

"And why not?" asked Mr. Bliss. "I'm sure it would benefit you."

Betty winced a little. Then she almost shouted her reply.

"Because you haven't got any leading lady and you haven't got any leading man—that's why not," she said. "Irene and Harry eloped last night. I stopped by Irene's house on my way here and her mother told me. She had just gotten a telegram. They'll be away for two weeks. And your home rehearsal caused it, too. So what do you think of that?"

No, it's not advisable to speak to Mr. Bliss about amateur theatricals. Not for several years.

NO DOUBT A NUMBER OF THE debutantes and their friends will go over to New York on April 1 for the first of the interschool and college dances to be held on the roof garden Astoria on Saturday evening, April's Fool Day . . .

This will be the first of a series of such dances to be held twice yearly . . . during the Easter and the Christmas vacations. The purpose of these dances is to bring the students of colleges and preparatory schools into closer relationship . . .

MRS. ALEXANDER WHITESIDE

John Roosevelt of Groton school, son of President Roosevelt, originated the idea during the Christmas holidays and with the help of a few of his classmates arrangements for the dance have just been completed. The idea proved so popular that committees have been formed and it was decided to include several of the leading schools and colleges . . . among them Harvard, Princeton, Yale, Amherst, Exeter Academy, Choate school, Groton, St. Paul's Romford, Loomis, St Marks, University of Virginia, Brown, Williams, Wesleyan, Hotchkiss, Taft, Deerfield Academy, Lawrenceville, Andover and Westminster.

The executive committee, in addition to Robert Durham, chairman, includes, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, Jr., Groton; Orrin K. Boice, Choate; William Healy, Choate, vice-chairmen; also Philip Knapp, Exeter; Sanford Kellogg, Princeton; Jack Peterson, Amherst, F. Tremaine Billings, Princeton, and Robert Lassiter, Yale.

John Roosevelt, Groton, is chairman of the arrangements committee and assisting him are Kenneth Hadden, Ben Welles and Sumner Gerard of Groton, as vice-chairman; and Richard Pinkham, Yale and Thomas Vietor, St. Paul's.

A number of distinguished patronesses are sponsoring these affairs . . . a junior committee is being formed, which will include a number of the season's most prominent debutantes, also post-debutantes and sub-debutantes . . . Just another marriage market, but a good idea . . .

Getting in the Social Register

SO MANY READERS HAVE written to ask how does one get into the social register that we take pleasure in telling you what we know about the important matter . . . whether you like it or not, social position, even in a relatively small sense, HAS a definite value . . .

There are twelve social registers which are published for leading cities throughout the country and "there is evedy reason to believe that the Social Register Association last year cleared a profit of between $45,000 and $50,000 as it has done consistently since 1923."

Actual picking of names for the compilations rests largely in the hands of Miss Bertha Eastmond, a quiet brown-haired woman of about 50, who rules what may be called the editorial end of the Social Register but keeps her name out of it.

She lives in an unpretentious corner house at Summit, New Jersey, but remains unknown to the local tradespeople. No newspaper has ever inveigled her into an interview. No picture agency contains her portrait. To society editors she remains a sort of disembodied spirit. Yet, there is no doubt but that in a majority of cases of names in the Register, Bertha Eastmond alone decides what newcomers are to be admitted, what erring ones are to be dropped from the rolls.

The offices of the Social Register Association are at 381 Fourth ave., New York city.

How to Make Application

MECHANICALLY, THE PROCESS OF ENTERING A name is simple enough . . . to gain admission, the candidate simply fills i na blank (obtainable on application) in the interests of getting his name . . . and that of his yacht . . . spelled correctly. This he turns in, at the same time encouraging from three to five of his already listed friends to write urging that he be listed.

The letters SHOULD appear spontaneous, in the manner of letters endorsing a candidate for a club. They should stress geneology, go into detail.

The admission committee is reported to be Charles Keller Beekman, owner of the association, Miss Eastmond, Morton Bogue, law partner of Mr. Beekman, and Ralph Walcott, attorney for the estate of Louis Keller, late owner of the association.

For out-of town registers, these four inquisitors are said to rely on the written testimony of local correspondents . . . among them, for Boston, Mrs. John J. Attridfie; for Baltimore, Miss Nannie Poor; for Chicago, Mrs. Louisa Sanborn Hill; for San Francisco, Mrs. Jacques Henrici.

Anyone may buy a copy of Social Register. These facts were sent to us by the magazine FORTUNE and we give them to you simply as a matter of interest.

WE HEAR THAT THE Architects' Club Ball of Somerset st., the other night, was simply a riot of fun. Every one went in poverty regalia, and what a howl it was! It constitutes the "Beaux Arts" of Boston, and fittingly takes place on Beacon Hill.

Miss Cecily Livermore, escorted by Mr. Frederick Crockett, appeared in a snappy "poverty special." Miss Elizabeth Soule, one of Boston's elite, went in rags and tatters.

On March 31, in Weston town hall, the residents of Auburndale and Weston are to feature a most interesting venture,—"A Trip to Hawaii." Mrs. George Bailey, nee Miss Alice Cooper, of Honolulu, who has written most interestingly on Hawaii, has charge of the arrangements.

One of the scenes is to take place on board a ship, and the last scene is to be in Mrs Bailey's garden in Hawaii. Mrs Dudley Ranney is to sing. The men's quartet consists of Wilmot Whitney, V. Harry Patterson, Richard Dewey, Francis Pooler.

Mrs. Gordon Curtis, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Spencer, Mr. and Mrs. John Scott, Mr. George Bailey, Miss Alice Bailey, Miss Edith Seabury and Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Howes are among the Weston's residents who are taking active part in the pageant.

At the 1915 Sewing Circle, held at the home of Mrs. Lothrop Withington in Clyde st., Brookline, Mrs. Talbot Chase was seen wearing a brown satin afternoon frock, with matching brown hat. Mrs. Mortimer Pratt of Chestnut Hill wore a brown tweed skirt and soft wool sweater. Mrs. Raymond Bodwell of Weston appeared in a spring tweed of an exquisite shade of green, with an apricot sweater.

Mrs. Samuel Mixter wore navy blue with a lighter shade blue scarf and hat. Mrs. Evelyn Thompson wore a dark brown crepe with peach top, and a brown hat. Her exquisite cameo pin of odd workmanship created a charming touch to the ensemble.

MR. BOSTON

$5000 for Welfare ↑ Title Bout Referee
Bowser Bets Curley Hockey Fans Wild
George Came Back ↓ Johnny Hallahan

By JACK CONWAY

Paul Bowser told me a secret.

"I have made a little bet with Mayor Curley," said the promoter, "that the Welfare Department's share of the receipts of the Ed Don George-Nick Lutze world's championship wrestling bout at the Garden on Friday night will be at least $5000.

Mr. Boston

"I think my wager is a sure thing. I have agreed to give the city a cut of the gate. It is my guess that the show will draw between $20,000 and $25,000. It is the hottest match since Henri DeGlane and Gus Sonnenberg jammed 22,000 persons into the Garden for a $12,000 gate at the Boston Evening American's Christmas Basket Fund show.

"I find that when you offer the public the attraction it wants that you do not have to worry about the depression. George and Lutze are two of the finest athletes in the world. Don regained his world's championship at the age of 27 after having lost it two years ago to Strangler Lewis.

"Ed has been a hard luck wrestler. When he defeated Sonnenberg on the coast two years ago last January, I thought he would prove unbeatable. I figured he would shatter box office records everywhere. He is a splendid physical specimen, is a million times as handsome as Bull Martin and knows wrestling.

"The trouble with most of the fellows who have come into wrestling from college athletics is that they do not know the fundamentals of the mat game. They have a flying tackle and maybe a college cheer. That's about all. George, on the other hand, won a flock of amateur and college titles at wrestling before he stepped into the professional game. He is a finished product today.

"The fact George could stage a comeback after losing his title to Lewis indicates he possesses real courage. The history of athletics proves that few men can come back once they have been tipped from their throne.

"I like George's viciousness when he is in the ring. After all, wrestling is not a pink tea game. It is like hockey, boxing, football and the other major sports that draw the greatest crowds."

Bowser in Doubt as to Who Will Referee Match

"I have not yet named the referee for the title bout. I first wish to talk things over with George and Lutze. Nick has already put in a protest against Sam Smith. Sam happened to be the referee in the last George-Lutze bout. The referee was knocked out of the ring, and did not see Lutze score what I considered a winning fall.

"There are plenty of capable referees and I believe I shall get George and Lutze to agree on some first class official. If they fail to do so I shall name the referee. If necessary, I shall referee the match myself. It is so important to both wrestlers that I do not wish either of them to enter the ring with a mental hazard.

"I do not agree with the general opinion that Lutze has more color and crowd appeal than George. Nick is a brilliant showman, but so is George. I do not care which man wins. I have both wrestlers under contract for future appearances in this city."

Excitement at Hockey Matches Contagious

I find that hockey crowds reflect the excitement of the rival players in an important game. At the Garden on Saturday night some of the fans tried to punch other rooters as rapidly as the members of the Bruins and Maple Leafs flashed around the ice. I do not believe anybody objects if it occasionally becomes necessary for John Law to step into the picture to calm down the noble cash customers.

I believe the tremendous success of hockey and wrestling is due to the fact the crowd becomes steamed up and stages a few private fights of its own. At wrestling shows it is not uncommon for the fans to surge to the ringside and take a poke at a wrestler who happens to get bumped out of the ring. I saw a spectator at a recent Arena show push his way past six cops and crack Bob Russell on the chin with as perfect a right hand punch as was ever tossed. The police made a rush for the fan, but he evaded them and returned to his seat with a broad smile on his face.

Nerve specialists tell me that folks who get steamed up at athletic contests and blow off their excess steam by taking a punch at somebody never suffer from a nervous breakdown. Neither do the fanatics who yell in your ear until you desire to drop them into a river.

Bob Quinn, former Red Sox owner, always maintained that a cash customer had the right to make a little noise if he wished to do so. The trouble with modern baseball is that the players have been placed under too many restrictions. The umpires are considered more sacred than the Cabots and the Lowells of Harvard. As a result baseball has lost some of its former appeal. Docile ball players cannot be expected to get a crowd excited.

Ty Cobb was one of the most colorful figures baseball has known. He drew thousands to ball games. In addition to being a great ball player, Cobb had the happy faculty of getting into trouble. He was either attacking somebody or getting attacked. And everybody wished to be on hand when the excitement took place. It was not an uncommon sight to see Cobb escorted from the field by a regiment of cops who fought to guard him against the fury of the crowd.

Johnny Hallahan's Death Mourned by Sports World

The newspaper world and athletics lost a leader in the death of John J. (Johnny) Hallahan, a member of the sports staff of the Boston Globe. Hallahan was a fearless writer and had a complete knowledge of all branches of sports. He was quick to recognize ability in a young athlete and always aided him. He knew more about track athletics than anybody in New England. His writings of Olympic meetings were widely read. We consider Hallahan's death a personal loss.

Up Diamond Ladder With Eddie Collins

By GEORGE UNDERWOOD

CHAPTER XIX

Next to Walter Johnson in pitching greatness, and quite the queerest "character" in baseball, George Edward "Rube" Waddell. That is what Eddie Collins considers the irrepressible eccentric [illegible] who 30 years ago set pitching records that never have been surpassed.

[illegible]

"I think it was Chief Bender," says Eddie, "who told me of Waddell's debut with the Athletics and how only 27 men faced him in that inaugural game with New York. On another occasion that year against the same team Waddell retired the same three players, Gilbert, Howell and Cronin, on strikes in the third, sixth and ninth innings, and in one inning pitched only nine balls.

RUBE CAME BACK

"I remember back in 1908 when Mack got tired of Rube's eccentricities and released him to the Browns and what happened the first time we faced Waddell in a St. Louis uniform. What happened is a matter of baseball history. Rube fanned 16 of us, just to show Connie what a mistake he had made. That created an American League strikeout record for a nine-inning game.

"Back in 1908 Waddell made a pitching record which only Walter Johnson has tied. That was striking out 26 batsmen in two consecutive games. Rube compiled the greatest seven year big league strike out record ever made. Between 1902 and 1908 he struck out 1801 batsmen. He fanned 3[illegible] in 1904 alone."

PHILADELPHIA DEBUT

It was Harry Davis who induced Connie Mack to sign Waddell for the Athletics, says Collins.

With a balance wheel Waddell might have been even greater than Johnson, says Collins. But Rube was utterly irresponsible and couldn't be depended on. Whenever he wanted to hunt or fish he took time off whether Mack liked it or not. Following that great st[illegible] with the Athletics in 1902 Rube suddenly disappeared. Connie found him tending bar over in Camden and pitching for a semi-pro team.

Connie brought him back and he pitched wonderful ball for the A's until Mack sold him to the Browns in 1908. Pitching his first game for the Browns Waddell let the White Sox down with one hit. There never was but one pitcher greater than Waddell. That was Walter Johnson. As a character Rube stood alone. He was even "buggier" than "Bugs Raymond."

All-American Hockey Finale Probable

[illegible] the Detroit Red Wings.

In the spring of '29, the Bruins won the N. H. L. championship by taking two straight games from the Canadiens and defeated Rangers who eliminated Americans and Toronto in the playdowns.

Officials Praised

Odie Cleghorn and [illegible] Daraucault handled the [illegible] Bruin-Toronto game [illegible] and [illegible] was highly commented upon by both teams.

Here's one for the book. In the [illegible] Smythe, Art [illegible] been the unanimous [illegible] as coach of the All [illegible] team. Connie [illegible] Ross brought together [illegible] of players who went [illegible] the Prince of Wales Cup [illegible] was deserving of the honors which the experts con[illegible] upon Curtis Lester Patrick.

Both the Bruins and Maple Leafs [illegible] out today at the Garden. The [illegible] practice at their [illegible] hour and Supt. Jim Eustis [illegible] a new sheet of ice made for Toronto.

Managing Director Con Smythe and Business Manager Frank Selke returned from Syracuse this morning, after sitting in on the [illegible] Syracuse playoff game last night.

Jack Slattery, former Braves' scout, and Leo Hawley, dropped into the University Club yesterday to pay a visit to their old friend "Stoolie" Tom Daly.

Leafs Tour Boston

The Maple Leafs went on a sight seeing trip of Greater Boston yesterday, visiting Harvard, Boston College, the Navy Yard and the Fish Pier.

After attending Mass yesterday morning, Joe Primeau got lost, and it took him an hour to find the University Club.

Charlie Sands, recently brought up from Syracuse, appears to be a fixture with the Leafs, and Coach Dick Irwin is bemoaning the fact that he did not acquire the former Fort William right winger six weeks ago.

With Red Horner and Ace Bailey hors de combat, the Maple Leafs are under too much of a handicap to hope to eliminate the Bruins.

TORONTO ACES INJURED FOR 2D GARDEN CONFLICT

By BILL GRIMES

Three American Division qualifiers came through with flying colors in the first games of the National Hockey League playoffs, Bruins beating Toronto, Red Wings shutting out Maroons and Rangers swamping Les Canadiens, thus bearing out the predictions of the experts.

Of the American Division contenders for Stanley Cup the Bruins had the closest call, going almost 15 minutes of overtime to beat the Maple Leafs.

The conflict at the Garden was one of the most thrilling playoff games in the annals of N. H. L. hockey. From start to finish it was an [illegible] game. Marty Barry put the climax to a nerve evening by caging a Dit Clapper rebound in overtime.

GARDEN FRAY CLEAN

Although the Bruins and Maple Leafs played strenuous hockey nothing malicious developed during the 74:14 minutes of action. The body checking was hard but in most cases well within bounds.

For a club weakened through injuries to two of its stars, the Maple Leafs fought a [illegible] battle. The holders of the Stanley Cup [illegible] the Bruins [illegible] overtime [illegible] were playing without Red Horner and Ace Baile.

They put their all in the first game and having failed it is questioned if they will be able to score more than one victory over the favored Bruins in this series.

Moreover the Maple Leafs are more or less crippled for the second game which will be played tomorrow night at the Garden. King Clancy is a mass of bruises, Busher Jackson suffered two painful [illegible] and most of the others are carrying [illegible] of the first encounter with the Bruins.

LEAFS COURAGEOUS

The Maple Leafs will be without Horner and Bailey tomorrow night. But if they do take another beating they will go down fighting for they are a fighting [illegible] even with the odds against them.

The Bruins and Maple Leafs will hold [illegible] at the Garden [illegible]

The Red Wings are [illegible] favored to eliminate the Maroons, while [illegible] Les Canadiens [illegible] be able to make up the three goals [illegible] to Rangers in New York [illegible]

The defeat of Maroons by Detroit in Montreal was one of the biggest upsets in years. The Wings had not won a game in the Forum this season [illegible] Saturday night.

It was predicted [illegible] if the Wings were able to [illegible] Maroons to a tie or even one [illegible] Detroit would win the round on its home ice. With a two goal lead going into the second and final game, which will be played tomorrow night in Detroit Olympia, the Red Wings are as good as in the semi-finals.

AMERICAN FINALE LIKELY

Unless either the Canadiens or Maroons stage a comeback, the [illegible] series will be an All American tussle. The Bruins have a decided edge over Maple Leafs. The second round among the runner-up and third place winners favor Detroit and Rangers, with the former better than an even bet to reach the finals.

Due to the brand of hockey played in the opening game a capacity crowd will turn out for the second and final Bruin-Toronto game tomorrow night. The Bruin management wishes to impress upon the fans that reservations cannot be held after noon today, per [illegible] from the National Hockey League.

N. E. AMATEUR RING TITLES AT STAKE TONIGHT

ACE WARRIORS SWAP SOCKS AT ARENA

By JACK CONWAY

Sixty-four amateurs toss leather in the New England boxing championships, staged at the Arena tonight.

The class of the New England boxers will strut their stuff. In order to eliminate inexperienced boxers, tournaments were first staged in the main boxing centers. The winners and runnersup in these matches were then named to compete in the New England championships.

It was formerly customary to stage the title bouts on two nights. The entry lists were thrown open to everybody, and in many cases boys were very much overmatched. Under the new system only the best of the simon pure punch flingers are permitted to compete in the championships. This results in better bouts.

The first tussle will get under way at 6:30 p. m. The last of the final matches will be over by midnight.

There is a particularly large number of boxers of Italian descent competing in the championship tourney. The reason for this is the announcement by William Kenney, president of the New England A. A. U., that the best of the Italian-American boxers will be named for a team to compete at the World's Fair in Chicago on Italian Day, which has been set for August 3.

There will be bouts in the eight championship classes tonight. In each class there are some classy boxers seeking the title. The entries:

B. C. NINE HOLDS FIRST DRILL

The first practice of the current edition of Boston College baseball will find 20 men reporting this afternoon to Coach Frank McCrehan at Alumni Field.

The restricted budget has forced the mentor to limit his squad to 20 men. He will call the rest of the men later.

With only two regulars missing from the last year's team McCrehan hopes to have a strong team in the field when the Eagles open against the Red Sox on April 7 at Fenway Park.

Capt. Jim Crowley probably will alternate during the season between shortstop and third base.

The catcher's berth is going to be the course of a battle between four [illegible] veteran candidates: Ed Kelly, Ray [illegible], Ray [illegible] and Duke McIntyre.

The mound situation will center around Buddy [illegible] flash; Jim Powers, another veteran; George McLaughlin and [illegible] Plausse. Three sophomores show much promise: Hank Duff, Tom Callahan and Ed Prendergast.

In addition to Capt. Crowley, four more infielders don spikes: Paul Kittredge, first baseman; Pete Chesnulevich, second sacker; "Tip" Concannon and Bob Graney, who will fill in at third or short.

Johnny Freitas, Roger Shea, Bill Boehner, who is making a comeback after two years' absence from the diamond, and Bob Curran are outfield candidates.

Ebbetts-Heuser Fray N. Y. Ring Highlight

New York, March 27 (AP)—Opening a dull boxing program for the week, Stanley Poreda and Tom Heeney meet in a 10-round heavyweight scrap at the St. Nicholas Arena here tonight.

Poreda, one of the most promising of the younger heavyweights, is hitting the comeback trail after his six-round knockout at the hands of the late Ernie Schaaf on Jan. 6.

Poreda will be favored although the veteran Heeney is no easy customer to whip.

New York's second show of the week in Madison Garden Friday night, will feature a return light heavyweight encounter between Adolph Heuser of Germany and Harry Ebbets of Freeport, N. Y.

These two staged a great battle here recently with Heuser winning the decision and earning a "shot" at champion Maxey Rosenbloom. All the German got out of the title bout, however, was a sound cuffing.

Johnny Risko, veteran Cleveland heavyweight, and baby Arizmendi, speedy Mexican featherweight, furnish the other highlights of the week. Risko faces Dick Daniels of Minneapolis at Cleveland tomorrow night and Arizmendi tackles Pedro Masquera of Ecuador at Los Angeles, also tomorrow night.

MARTY PRAISES IVY ANDREWS

Sarasota, Fla., March 27—Manager Marty McManus of the Red Sox expects Ivy Paul Andrews to win 14 ball games this season.

The big Alabama pitcher, who came to Boston with Henry Johnson and Dusty Rhodes, has impressed the Sox boss.

"I expect Andrews to win about 14 games for the Red Sox this year," said McManus, as he watched the boy pitch to the batters. "He has plenty of ability.

"I'll bet the Yankees would give anything to get Andrews and Johnson back again. The Red Sox got a real break when they managed to get the two young hurlers.

"With such pitchers as Andrews, Johnson, Rhodes, Weiland, Kline, Brown and McLaughlin on the Sox pitching staff, we should go places this year.

"Of course most of the other pitchers who are working out here need more experience before they are ready for the major league, fellows like Eddie Gallagher, Gordon McNaughton and Johnny Welch."

The improvement in Justin McLaughlin has startled Marty. Justin is a boy who will be a great help to the club.

The Red Sox play the Reds at Tampa tomorrow and then shove off for Orlando, Florida, where the Hoseners meet Montreal on Thursday.

NO SURE method of preventing baldness or regrowing hair was known thirty years ago. Even then men experimented with careful remedies which usually did more harm than good. Now—a few old-fashioned men still use their scalps as experimental laboratories for patent remedies and barber-shop treatments. But modern-minded men have learned that baldness can be avoided and hair can be regrown, when proper specialized treatment is administered to the scalp.

Thinking men realize that the science of hair culture has advanced in pace with other scientific discoveries. They know that Thomas treatment offers the most precise, reliable method known to modern science of overcoming the various types of dandruff, stopping abnormal hair-fall, and re-growing hair on thin or bald spots. "SHARLIE"

Sharlie's Mother Shocks Her With the Information That She Is Planning a Divorce

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Pretty, vivacious Sharlie Dunn is forced by her mother to marry Eddie Wallis, young ne'er-do-well, after Sharlie had spent the night in his car, which had run out of gas. Although Sharlie enjoys Eddie's company, she is not in love with him. After the ceremony, Eddie is killed by an automobile. Sharlie returns to her mother's home. Mrs Dunn, nicknamed "Dodie," and her friend, Maud Hanaberry, plan a party while their husbands are away. Sharlie is sent to her grandmother's. Finding her grandmother out, Sharlie goes to a dance hall. She meets a young man who insists on taking her home. Frightened she phones Jim Barnum, a neighbor's son, who takes her to his home. Peeking in her own window, Sharlie sees her mother and Maud Hanaberry with two men. Next morning, Grandmother Dunn calls and reprimands "Dodie" for her actions.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

"YES, BUT YOU'RE GOING about it in the wrong way," Edna said calmly. "It's all right for you to go to your grandmother's to stay until your father gets home if you want to. But this is your home and you ought to live in it . . . Your problem is all this time that you have on your hands. It's no wonder you get into mischief with nothing real and important to do."

"Dodie won't let me get a job and she says it costs a lot to go to business school," said Sharlie dabbing at her eyes with a small pink handkerchief.

"Well, I'll lend you the money for it—and you can pay me back as soon as you're earning a salary," Edna went on. "You come up to my office tomorrow noon and I'll take you over to the [illegible] Business School myself."

Sharlie heard her [illegible] man. Then [illegible] she came back into the [illegible]

Tall, Blond Man

"It was a man asking for Miss Dunn and Miss Hanaberry," she said, frowning in a puzzled way. "A tall blond man—very good looking."

"I'll bet a hat that it was one of those men that they had here last night!" cried Sharlie, and ran to the front windows of the flat . . . Sure enough, the cream-colored roadster was on the other side of the street! One man was sitting in it, and a tall blond one in white clothes was just getting into it.

[illegible]

"What are you trying to tell me, Dodie?" she asked. "Are you getting ready to leave Dad?"

[illegible]

"That's what I'm getting ready to do, Sharlie," she answered. "I've planned to do it for years. I kept telling myself that I would do it as soon as you were old enough to take care of yourself and keep house for your father. That's why I didn't want you to go to business college or get a job. I knew you'd be needed here."

Terrible Words

She paused. "Edna had to butt in, of course," she said bitterly, "and give you the money for Gerow's school. But it's money thrown away, because you'll have to give up all thought of business college and keep house for your father and Edna."

Sharlie shook her head. "I'm not going to give it up," she said firmly. "I can go there and keep this flat in order, too."

[illegible]

And now I want you to promise me that you won't say a word to your father about those people who were here last Saturday night." Dodie's voice ran on. "I don't want him to know anything about me that he shouldn't know, Sharlie. You see, I'll have to ask for alimony—"

[illegible]

Sharlie's father arrives home suddenly. How does this affect Dodie's plans? Tomorrow's installment is full of thrills.

"My Boy Franklin"

was an unwarranted number of deaths among sailors due to drowning. The cause he found upon investigation was nearly always their inability to swim, so Franklin established a trophy to be awarded each year to the winner of the swimming contests he inaugurated for officers and their crews.

To the consternation of Washington officialdom he [illegible] wholesale [illegible] of his department. He was determined that the Navy should not be the government [illegible] and harped on its [illegible] effort was [illegible] to remedy [illegible]

[illegible] he took [illegible] the fleet [illegible] love of his [illegible] and he [illegible] anything that in any way reflected upon its credit. For that reason when he found during his term of office that there were magistrates who were giving miscreants suspended sentences on condition that they enlist in the Navy, he refused to condone such a practice and broadcast the statement that "the Navy is not a Reform institution. We cannot and will not in such action jeopardize the morale of the Naval Service of the U. S."

Welcome Interlude

[illegible] though Franklin was upon [illegible] work he [illegible] that [illegible] a welcome [illegible] There was for instance the time before our entrance into the war when the Navy was particularly anxious to obtain a certain kind of Diesel engine that could be made only in Zurich. Put [illegible] an order was simple [illegible] installing an officer in Switzerland who would act as inspector during its construction presented a more difficult problem [illegible] the law there was no way [illegible] which one could send a man [illegible] provide him with funds adequate to cover [illegible] and salaries [illegible] one listed him as a naval attache. Now Franklin knew that [illegible] around that we were sending a naval attache to Switzerland the whole world would rock with [illegible] However, needing the engine [illegible] there was nothing [illegible] but [illegible] it, and much [illegible] surprise, although the man remained there in his official [illegible] new tape [illegible] capacity for a whole year [illegible]

From time to time Franklin [illegible] off on tours of inspection [illegible] that the [illegible] while on [illegible] one of [illegible] were [illegible] much by his sheer enjoyment of the expedition as they [illegible] Franklin never has been able to resist an opportunity [illegible] of [illegible] anywhere on a destroyer and when in 1913 I heard that he was scheduled to put in at Eastport [illegible] On [illegible] up I heard later they came [illegible] body of water that [illegible] into two channels. The [illegible] was wide and deep, the other, [illegible] Narrows which shortened the route by 20 miles, was winding and shallow and known to have a treacherous [illegible] and treacherous tide.

"You can take the ship through the narrows," Franklin told the [illegible] who came to him for orders. "Aye, aye, sir," he saluted and walked back to his chart. He [illegible] for some little time obviously perplexed. Finally he returned to Franklin and reported that his chart showed there to be [illegible] six feet of water while his ship drew 10. Franklin smilingly [illegible] him to risk it, adding, "I'll assume full responsibility. In fact I'll take her through myself." The captain was clearly horrified but [illegible] since his orders emanated [illegible] the Assistant Secretary of the Navy, there was nothing he could do but make the best of his [illegible] instructions.

[illegible] the Captain [illegible] Franklin assumed [illegible] place next to the Quartermaster and took his ship through without [illegible] anything. What Franklin had remembered and the Captain overlooked was that it was high tide and that at such times there were 22 feet of water in the Lubec Narrows, 12 more than required for safety.

Franklin's connection with the Navy took him on many interesting journeys he might otherwise never have made and sent him under auspices for which as a private citizen he could not have hoped. I remember that in 1915 he went in his official capacity as one of the Commissioners to the World's Fair at San Francisco. He had thought that a Naval Review of warships of all nations would be a fine feature with which to start off the opening day. It was left to the State Department to look after the issuing of the formal invitations requesting the various countries to participate in the regatta. Much to Franklin's surprise and amusement he learned that both Bolivia and Switzerland, neither of whom of course had a Navy, had been urged to add their warships to the exercises.

The next installment comprises Roosevelt's service during the war, his campaign for Vice-President on the ticket with James M Cox and then his feeling that the time had come to place his own affairs in order, having at that time five children.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of [illegible] water [illegible] gum and expect them to make you [illegible] sweet and buoyant and full of sun.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is [illegible] pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at all stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.

All on her pretty figure;

ADORABLE, AREN'T THEY, MA?
YEAH! I NEVER SEEN SECH LOVELY BRIDE'S-MAID'S GOWNS BEFORE!
MODES
Y'SAY POLLY'S GONNA BE A BRIDE'S-MAID NEXT WEEK? WHO'S GITTIN' "HOOKED"?
DEL. AN' AMOS!
THEY'RE PUTTY CALM ABOUT IT, I MUST SAY, SUSIE.
THAT'S CAUSE THEY DON'T KNOW IT YET!

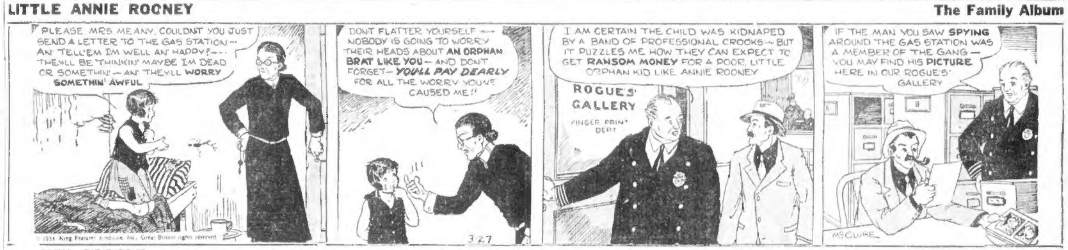
The Family Album



PLEASE MRS MEANY, COULDNT YOU JUST SEND A LETTER TO THE GAS STATION — AN' TELL'EM I'M WELL AN' HAPPY? — THEY'LL BE THINKIN' MAYBE I'M DEAD OR SOMETHIN' — AN' THEY'LL WORRY SOMETHIN' AWFUL
DON'T FLATTER YOURSELF — NOBODY IS GOING TO WORRY THEIR HEADS ABOUT AN ORPHAN BRAT LIKE YOU — AND DON'T FORGET — YOU'LL PAY DEARLY FOR ALL THE WORRY YOU'VE CAUSED ME!!
I AM CERTAIN THE CHILD WAS KIDNAPED BY A BAND OF PROFESSIONAL CROOKS — BUT IT PUZZLES ME HOW THEY CAN EXPECT TO GET RANSOM MONEY FOR A POOR, LITTLE ORPHAN KID LIKE ANNIE ROONEY

Help to Home Owners

Fitchburg Banks Set Good Example

Two Fitchburg banks have set for us a fine example which might well be adopted by the banking fraternity as a whole.

They have voluntarily reduced their interest rates on home mortgages to five per cent and their dividend rates to their depositors to three and one-half per cent.

Surely this decision on their part is bound to be beneficial.

Our home-owners are harassed.

High taxes have struck them a deadly blow. Their own incomes have been impaired. In many cases their tenants are out of work and they have carried them along for months, even for two or three years, rather than turn them heartlessly into the street.

In one section of Boston alone we have seen some 8000 homes seized for non-payment of taxes. The conditions which apply in Boston unfortunately exist pretty much throughout the State.

We see this sad spectacle resulting from high taxes and depreciated incomes and, at the same time, we see the interest rates on their mortgages remain relentlessly unchanged.

Now, let us be fair in this matter and give credit where it is due. It is true, of course, that many of the banks have been considerate of the distress of the home-owners and have not pushed them, in all cases, for payment of the interest they could not pay or reduction of the mortgages they could not reduce.

But the interest rates still stand and, even in these cases, it continues to mount as a heavy burden upon the homes of our people.

The costs of living have come down. Materials are cheaper. Let the interest rates on mortgages come down, too.

The Boston Evening American, therefore, suggests that the savings banks, the co-operative banks and the savings departments of trust companies immediately hold a State-wide conference and consider the advisability and necessity of reducing the mortgage interest rates for the time being to four and one-half per cent and the dividend rate to three per cent.

Perhaps the banks will find they will benefit from this change.

The banks want fluidity, not frozen assets. They want "paper" that will move, and lower rates of interest should move it. The bank cannot prosper by foreclosing upon homes and attempting to sell them upon a glutted, low-priced real estate market.

The depositors want security. Better for them to have a three per cent dividend that is certain than a four per cent dividend paid out of mortgages that may be defaulted in the future.

There is nothing more despairing than for the American citizen to be ousted from the home which he and his family have established by years of thrift and frugality.

And there could be nothing more comforting, nothing more stimulating to the program of recovery which President Roosevelt has inaugurated, than the feeling of security that would be created among the home-owners of this Commonwealth.

We want to see the banks take up this matter seriously and, in view of certain conditions which now exist, we can expect a good and public-spirited decision by them.

No Cause for Alarm

Hitlerism Said to Disturb France

Hitler's fight against German Catholics is bitterly resented in Bavaria, a German state almost entirely Catholic. Those that oppose Hitler are to be gathered in concentration camps, and kept at continuous hard labor. Their crime is a demand for recognition of Bavaria's rights, as one of the German states, and their belief in the ability of the German people to govern themselves now, as in times past.

A Mussolini, Kemal Pasha or Stalin, seizing absolute power, may, with constructive work and necessary reforms, atone in part for depriving a nation of freedom. But if Germans tolerate, for long, conditions alleged to have been imposed upon them by Hitler, they will do little honor to their past history, to the great rulers, scientists, writers and philosophers of the German race.

Can you imagine Hitler, with the brown shirt imitating Mussolini's black shirt, the upraised arm imitating Mussolini's gesture, and the queer little mustache imitating nothing in particular, brought to the bar for judgment by Goethe, Schiller, Frederick the Great and Helmholtz. Would any German doubt their verdict?

France is said to be disturbed, even alarmed, by the Hitler demonstration. France need not be alarmed.

"A tale told by an idiot, full of sound and fury,"* signifies nothing, and should alarm no one.

Eighty Years Young

Joseph H. O'Neil is now 80 years old. Rather, he is 80 years young.

To hear him sing "Believe Me If All Those Endearing Young Charms," with a clear tenor voice that does not yet falter at the high notes and to note his delightful humor is to believe he has been marked by the "bloom of youth forever."

O'Neil has been School Committeeman, Congressman, banker and twice a nominee for Mayor. His old friends cling to him.

Perhaps you may find the reason for this affection for him in his own statement:

> "I have made it a rule in life that if I couldn't say anything good of a man I'd at least not speak ill of him."

Its a good rule for all to follow.

Daily Bible Text "He that hath my word let him speak my word faithfully."
—Jeremiah xxiii, 28.

New York Day by Day

Diary of a Modern Pepys

NEW YORK, March 27—Diary of a modern Pepys: Early, in my new paletot, to see Denise Coblentz's new Boston, Skippy. Then breakfasting with Jack Hobby, over from Paris, with news of the scatter of the old crowd around rue Cambon. And young Bob Hunt came afever over dining with Helen Keller at Forest Hills.

O. O. McIntyre

Working, and then to sit awhile with Verne Porter, abed for the day with the vapors. Afterward, to the Clay Morgans, talking to Captain Norman Reilly Raine the writer, Mrs. Arthur Samuels and others. Later walking down Riverside Drive in the gathering dusk.

To dinner with Kay Brush and Bon Winans, and the Otis Wieses and Lucius Beebe there. And talking long to Selma Robinson, but did not realize until home that she was the author of as graceful a book o verse as ever I read. So reading Negley Cochran's "E. W. Scripps."

In a Madison ave. skyscraper recently, was held one of the best patronized but least advertised art exhibits of the year. Behind a door bearing the simple lettering, "An American Place," were exhibited paintings of the celebrated Georgia O'Keeffe. No one was asked to buy, and pictures were sold only to those it was believed would appreciate them. Miss O'Keeffe does not sign her paintings. "Anyone may forge a signature," she believes.

Ted Saucier tells of the Scotsman directing a dinner guest to his apartment. "Push the front buzzer with your elbow, then take the elevator to the sixth floor, and, with your elbow, push the door bell on the right." The guest asked why he should use his elbow. "That's in case you decide to bring gifts," he explained.

Probably New York's most select luncheon club is The Coffee House. It remains the only semblance of Mme. Pettipa's French restaurant and Athens of Culture near the Cunard docks, where Jack Yeats, father of William Butler Yeats, sat at the head of the table, so ably directing conversation. Those privileged to visit The Coffee House hear nipping comments on the times, as well as largesse of humor. Royal Cortissoz and Robert Bridges, two wits of consular dignity, usually preside.

Every club has its outstanding wit. Bugs Baer at the Friars, Oliver Herford at the Players, and someone must have succeeded Wilton Lackaye in the Lambs. Godfrey Parson's shafts frequently ripple through the corridors of the Century. And Bainbridge Colby still reigns supreme at the University.

Thingumabobs: Montague Glass can play any piece he ever heard, by ear, on the piano . . . Frank Condon will work all night to play golf all day, and then sleep the clock around . . . W. R. Hearst is a window shopper . . . Chic Sale is a firm believer in astrology . . . Roy Wagner, movie historian, can paint as well as write, doing both excellently . . . Rupert Hughes often has several novels and articles going at the same time, skipping one to another . . . Dr. John Erdman, famous surgeon, calms himself with chess the night before some dangerous operation . . . Bayside will call Jim Corbett's street Corbett Road . . . Thomas Mitchell, actor-director, has not worn a hat in years.

One of the delights of sauntering in New York is that here and there, leavened among the herds, will loom a face that imparts a quick vibration. Today, for instance, in a block, I recognized Sherwood Anderson, Joseph Stransky, Amelia Earhart and H. L. Mencken.

And there was the time I recognized James Gordon Bennett, followed him into the Herald building and tackled him for a job. And did he give me a who-the-hell-are-you look and go on!

Are Males Moochers?

"HOW DO MEN get that way? Why, it's perfectly shameless—the favors they'll accept from a woman!"

No, it wasn't an indignant dowager of the Victorian vintage speaking. It was a Modern Professional Girl, who has just passed her exams—a lovely, lively, ash-blonde creature, age 27, and one of our most enthusiastic advocates of "equal rights and liberties for the sexes."

Elsie Robinson

"I'd heard other women complaining," she continued, pausing long enoung to light another cigarette from a smoldering stub, "but I didn't realize what it was all about until I left home and took an apartment for mysedl. And then—"

She laughed a bit ruefully, with an indignant sparkle to her delightfully mascared eyes.

"And then I began to think I'd started a municipal 'flop house'—for every eligible male of my acquaintance moved right in!

"Honestly, Elsie, you never saw anything like it. By 4:30, before I'd left my office, the phone calls would begin. 'How about a little party? No; none of this night club stuff! Let's go domestic for an evening—stir up a bite for ourselves. You know, one of those grand old-fashioned home meals that us poor devils who have to live in hall bedrooms never get. Got a little sirloin in your frigidaire? I'll be up and broil it for you, youngster.'

"And so, until I got wise to the racket, I'd rush out and pick up a steak with all the trimmings—and then spend a Perfectly Lovely Evening giving free hand-outs to my men friends.

"Honestly, that's the way it went, night after night. What did they contribute? Well, when they came the first time they might bring a few flowers, or a little candy. But never more than once. After that, they even expected me to supply the gin, and if I didn't—they'd give me the name of their bootlegger! Why, one of them actually called his bootlegger up, had him come over, and then 'borrowed' the money from me to pay him! Which, of course, he never paid back.

"Borrowing money from us—that's another one of the things those modern men do without the slighest compunction. Can you imagine your father, or mine, taking money from a woman, or letting a woman pay for his lunch or theater tickets? Yet these fellows do. The best they ever do is to agree to 'go Dutch'; and lots of times the won't even do that, but expect the girl to pay for everything!

"Getting free gas—that's another one of their rackets. Most of them have cars, but will they use them? Not if they can get the girl to use hers.

"Well, though I hate to admit it, the girls themselves are responsible for most of it! They start off all right, with a desire to be 'real fellows'; then they discover, as I did, that men have become so spoiled that you actually have to buy their companionship, or go without.

"Usually the girl, if she has a spark of pride, rebels when she makes this discovery. But you know how it is, Elsie? A working girl's life, unless she is living with her folks and old friends, is so terribly lonely. Sitting alone, night after night, you get so you'll do almost anything just to her a human voice. So you 'organize a little party.' Then the racket starts. But wouldn't you think men would be too proud to get that way?"

So there you have it—one of the commonest problems in this topsy-turvy age. And what's the answer?

Did, or didn't, we modern women ask for this when we clamored for Equal Rights—and got 'em? We wanted to be "treated like regular fellows," didn't we? But don't "regular fellows" borrow from each other; impose on each other? And when did you or anyone ever hear of one man "being chivalrous" to another man?

Then why should a man "be chivalrous" to a woman who loudly protests she's "as good as a man"—and proves it by competing and often beating him in business life?

Yet grafting on the girl friend's gas; sponging on her scrip—it does seem a bit raw, doesn't it?

But then, what? YOU tell.

Just Folks

Talking It Over

Mother, what matters after all
The changing market's rise or fall
Or whether home be large or small?

What matters fortune? Let us face
With calmness all that's taking place
And try with faith each day to grace.

We have each other and our friends!
On them all happiness depends;
Without them all our dreaming ends.

We can be brave and kindly still,
Can carry comfort to the ill,
And all God's plans for us fulfill.

And rich or poor, high place or low,
We still have friendship to bestow
On all we neighbor with and know.

Life is not measured after all
By market's rise or market's fall,
But how we answer every call.

Priestly; Child Labors; German Denials

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Boston Evening American

IN A UNITARIAN church in New York City, Sunday, the experiment performed 199 years ago by Joseph Priestley in his English laboratory, when he discovered oxygen, was repeated. The occasion was the 200th anniversary of Priestley's birth. Although an Englishman, driven out of his country by persecution because of his political liberalism in the days of the repression of the younger Pitt, this great scientist entered into the bitter controversy in America in the days of Hamilton and Jefferson.

No one today is especially proud of the persecution of this great liberal. Because he dared join in a dinner to celebrate the fall of the Bastile, the symbol of tyranny and oppression, and to sympathize with the Democratic trend of the French revolution, "patriots" burned the chapel where, as a nonconformist he preached, and sacked his home. The members of the Royal Academy snubbed him when he moved to London. These distinguished intellectuals, then, as so often, had no use for a man who stood for liberal principles.

Claude G. Bowers

Persecuted in England under Pitt he came to America, where the federalists carried on for Pitt, and the Jeffersonians welcomed him as a great man of science devoted to liberality, with open arms.

Priestley Gave Cobbett His Chance

When he reached New York he was given an uproarious welcome by the Liberals. Had he landed in Boston the dignitaries of the Essex junto would have demonstrated their intellectuality and aristocracy by snubbing him.

But in New York he was welcomed. The Democratic societies that have been so persistently lied about by reactionary historians even to this day, and Tammany Hall, presented him with addresses to which he replied.

This gave an opportunity to William Cobbett, one of the most unscrupulous tools of reaction in America, Albeit an Englishman. He wrote a savage pamphlet denouncing Priestley, and Democratic societies, and the Irish, and the French, and glorifying the England of Pitt—not that of Fox.

That made the fortune of Cobbett in America—the Federalists took him under their wing, and soon he was editing a party paper which in scurrility and falsehood was an easy match for the ravings of Callender.

Jefferson Rose to Priestley's Aid

It is impossible intelligently to think about the Joseph Priestly of America without thinking of his greatest champion and friend here, Thomas Jefferson. When the latter began planning the University of Virginia as a great liberal university he offered the great liberal scientist a professorship, but years were to elapse before the university could be established. In explaining the plans, Jefferson touched on Priestley's treatment in his country:

"How deeply have I been chagrined and mortified at the persecutions which fanaticisms and monarchy have excited against you, even here. At first I believed it was merely a continuance of the English persecution. But I observe that on the demise of 'Porcupine (Corbett) . . . dishes against you are as high seasoned as Porcupine's were. You have sinned against the church (the established church) and King, and can, therefore, never be forgiven."

On the 200th anniversary of Priestley's death it is well to recall the persecution of the liberal in America just before the great Democratic revolution of 1800 put an end to the lynching of liberty and the rights of the masses. Such incidents help us to understand American history.

Child Labor Must Be Ended

Apropos of liberality and humanity, William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, urges workers to battle for the Constitutional amendment to end child slavery in this country. I believe it is more "conservative" to call it "child labor," but it means the same thing. He announces that 10 states have ratified.

There is something rather disturbing in the tardiness with which states act on this amendment. Not one has been submitted to the people in two generations which should make such an appeal to men and women. It has now been almost a quarter of a century since Beveridge began a fight to purge the industrial life of the nation of this impurity. The four-day speech, backed with affidavits, he made in opening the battle is unequalled as a humanitarian document in the history of the Senate. Because it could not be answered, it has been ignored and neglected. The easiest and cleverest way for the forces of evil to meet the truth when it interferes with profit is to lift the eyebrows.

The only reason for the tardiness of Legislatures in acting on this amendment is that selfish forces, now profiting on the sweat of childhood, are against it. But at a time when millions of heads of families are in the street, common sense might well find something to think about in child labor.

Germany Must Halt Persecutions

From Germany come indignant protests against the stories of persecution of the Jews. Richard Von Kuehlmann, former foreign minister, now in this country, declares in the New York Times that no outrages of importance have been committed. He bases his belief on telephone talks to Germany and on cables from people there in whom he has confidence. He compares the stories of the outrages to the miserable propaganda of slander put out against the Germans in the war.

More important, perhaps, is the statement of Herman Wilhelm Goering, German minister of the interior, insisting that the new government is not a party to the persecution of the Jews, and admitting that "against the government's will, there have been individual acts of lawlessness and violence."

The most impressive feature of this statement is the admission that the stories of violence have not been without foundation in fact; the most promising feature the assurance that these have been against the will of the government. For if that be true, the government speedily will put an end to them. If it wishes to end the persecution and fails to do so, it confesses an inability to rule.

Hitler Can Stop Attacks on Jews

If there has been exaggeration in the reports of persecution and the outside world has given credence to them, it is due to the undoubted fact that Hitler's party, while seeking power, manifested an intense hostility to the Jews.

But if the new regime has no such intention, its hold upon its followers is such that a mere order can stop any semblance of racial persecution. The best answer to the protests from outside is to put things right inside, and Hitler can do it if he will.

A Splendid Record

Credit Unions Sound in Depression

Your thoughts have been focussed upon banks and finance by the extraordinary developments of the past two weeks.

Familiarize yourself with the remarkable work being done by the Credit Unions.

These splendid organizations have a two-fold purpose.

First, they provide a systematic method of saving for their members.

Secondly, they enable their members, out of these savings, to meet their other short-term credit problems at a low or normal rate of interest.

These credit unions are composed of working people and small farmers.

You will be interested to know that in all the financial troubles of the four years of depression NOT A SINGLE CREDIT UNION IN THIS COUNTRY WAS FORCED INTO INVOLUNTARY BANKRUPTCY.

The first Credit Union was established in Massachusetts twenty-four years ago.

Now they exist in thirty-four other States, all modeled upon the Massachusetts law and Massachusetts practices.

This excellent record should command your interest.

Communicate with the Credit Union National Extension Bureau at 5 Park Square, Boston, and there you can get any further and interesting information you require.
